

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TO MY KINSMEN AND OTHERS—

The Biographical, Historical and Genealogical Record of the descendants of our ancestor, JOHN DAVIS, upon which I have spent four years' labor, and not a little expense, nears completion, and will soon be ready for the press.

I have departed somewhat from the methods of some genealogists and have traced, not only the descendants of the male line, but also the descendants of the female line, thus bringing the record as far as was possible in full, down to date,

I have also traced the ancestry of many of those families which have become interlinked with ours by marriage, going back in many instances to the time that the ancestors of these families came to this country.

I have often wished since the commencement of the work that it had fallen into abler hands, and I have also been impressed with the fact that if it were to be done at all, it had been undertaken none too soon.

Older members of the family who were living when the work was commenced, and from whom much information was received, have passed away to join the great silent majority. Old town, church and property records, from which facts and data have also been drawn, are fast fading away, and will soon be illegible, so that unless the records are re-written and then printed, in a few years the facts obtainable from them will be forever lost.

The correspondence which has grown out of the compilation of this work has been very large. Over 3,000 letters have been sent, and answers to nearly all of them have been received.

Our fathers are gone, many of them sleep in unmarked graves, and many of the other graves are becoming unmarked by the ravages of the elements and time.

Statues and monuments may be bought, but a good name, the memory of the just, and the love of children and kindred may be for all, and are without price, outlasting epitaph and heraldry.

Our fathers were worthy of our remembrance and respect, and in preserving their memory, we honor ourselves.

A family genealogy is a most fitting tribute to them, as uniting their children in a common memory and feeling, and equally fitting for the future as a tie of kinship and a memorial of all their scattered children.

ALBERT H. DAVIS.

It only remains to be said that the author of the Davis Family Genealogy departed this life August 24th, 1887, worn out with long and intense suffering. At his request the manuscript and correspondence pertaining to the Genealogy have been looked over by the undersigned, and the endeavor has been made to carry out the Compiler's earnest wish, of having the matter prepared for the press. The undersigned has not been able to furnish much additional matter. His labor has been mainly the transfer of some fifty pages from loose sheets to the manuscript proper, which the compiler left nearly complete.

This manuscript shows on almost every page with what long continued diligence and care the author had pursued his work, until the inroads of disease could no longer be resisted, and he was forced to lay down his pen.

HISTORY

THE DAVIS FAMILY.

JOHN DAVIS, SEN., the ancestor, was born in England, in 1612. His wife, whose maiden name is unknown, was also born in England, died at East Hampton, Dec. 17, 1696. He died at East Hampton, Dec. 22, 1705, about 4 o'clock in the morning, aged 93 years. (See E. Hampton Church records.) Four children came with them to this country:

1. i. John, b. in England in 1676, d. at E. Hampton, L. I., Aug. 3, 1766.
2. ii. Hannah, b. in England in 1680, d. at E. Hampton, L. I., June 9, 1759.
3. iii. Thomas, b. in England in 1686, d. at E. Hampton, L. I., Aug. 30, 1751.
4. iv. Maryette, date of d. and b. unknown; she was baptized by Rev. Nathaniel Huntington; at E. Hampton, L. I., Sept. 16, 1704, under the head of "adult baptisms," (E. Hampton Church records.)

JOHN DAVIS (1) was married, Nov. 3, 1703, to Susanna Osborne. She died July, 1704. They had:

5. i. One child, who died Oct. 7, 1704. Ibid.

JOHN DAVIS (1) was married, 2d, to Puah Reeves, widow of Abraham Reeves, July 3, 1706. Abraham Reeves and wife, Puah, had one child, Mahitable, who married Jonathan Stratton, Jan. 30, 1730. The first husband of Puah Reeves was John Merry. They had two children, John and Hannah, who were baptized April 28, 1706. Hannah married Lion Gardiner, a descendant of Lord Lion Gardiner, of Gardiner's Island, Jan. 11, 1721. It is not known whether John Davis (1) had any children who grew up to manhood or womanhood. It is evident by his will which will hereinafter appear, that he had no children or other descendants living at the time he made his will, else he must have disinherited them, which seems hardly probable. All we have been able to learn upon this point is, that he had a daughter Elizabeth baptized June 13, 1707, and a daughter Hannah baptized June 29, 1735, both under the head of "Infant baptisms or children under age." But whether they lived to grow up to womanhood, we have been unable to ascertain. There is a tradition that Elizabeth Davis married John Dimon, Dec. 25, 1722, was the daughter of John Davis (1). Puah Reeves, wife of John Davis, died Dec. 24, 1747, in the 74th year of her age. He was a large land holder for those days, as is shown by the land records of East Hampton.

The following last will and testament we copy from the Records in the Surrogate's office of the City and County of N. Y., Liber twenty-five, page two-hundred and ninety-two:

In the name of God, Amen, I, John Davis, of the town of East Hampton, in the county of Suffolk, and province of New York, yeoman, being aged and attended with many infirmities, but of sound and perfect mind and memory, and calling to mind the uncertainty of this transitory life, do make and ordain this my last will and testament, in the following form and manner: That is to say principally and first of all, I recommend my soul to God who gave it, and my body to be buried at the discretion of my executors hereinafter named, nothing doubting but at the general resurrection I shall receive the same by the mighty power of God, and as touching such temporal estate as it hath pleased God to bless me in this life, I give, bequeath and dispose of the same in the following form and manner:

Imprimis, I give unto my daughter-in-law, Mehitable Stratton, the use of the house and home lot now in her possession, for and during the term of her natural life, and after her decease to go to her son Benjamin Stratton, and to his heirs and assigns forever.

Item, I give unto Benjamin Stratton, son of Mehitable Stratton, my lot of land lying in Newtown, between the land of John Mulford and land of Thomas Talmage, containing about ten acres, as also one piece of land lying between John Parsons and Beriah Dayton's land, fronting the lane commonly called Carryl's lane, about sixteen acres, as also one eighth of a share throughout the land of Montouk; also one piece of land in the five acre division adjoining to Hand's Creek path, with the amendment, it being about twelve acres; also one acre and a half and twenty poles, allotment of commonage, with all the land laid out in the five acre division, except what I have sold; also one piece of meadow lying in Accobounock Creek, containing about two acres, bounded by John Parsons northerly, and Timothy Miller southerly; also my meadow at Northwest Harbor, running eastwardly from said Harbor to the head of the creek which parts my meadow from the meadow of Capt. Baker and Isaac Hedges; all which said lands, meadow and rights of, I do give unto the said Benjamin Stratton, and to his heirs and assigns forever. But the improvement to be to his mother, Mehitable Stratton, as long as she shall remain a widow. But if it should happen that the said Benjamin Stratton should die before he arrives at the age of thirty years, without lawful issue, then and in such case my will is that what I have given him shall go to my nephew John Davis, Jr., or his issue.

Item, I give unto John Davis and Benjamin Stratton, my great wood lot of wood land lying near Northwest containing one hundred and thirty acres to be equally divided between them, and it shall be to them, their heirs and assigns forever.

Item, I give unto Jonathan Baker, and to his heirs and assigns forever, one piece of meadow lying on the east side of Accobounock Harbor, near the east beach, adjoining to the meadow of said Baker.

Item, I give to Deborah Miller the wife of Josiah Miller, the sum of forty shillings.

Item, I give to John Davis, Jr. the sum of sixty pounds.

Item, I give unto Benjamin Stratton my chest with a double lock, and all my husbandry tools and instruments, all my dung and new fence and wearing apparel. I give unto Mehitable Stratton all my cattle, swine, grain in my house and growing, and all my provisions, hay and other fodder, and all my firewood, pewter and silver spoons, and half the rest of my household goods, and twenty pounds in cash.

Item, I give unto Abigail the wife of Daniel Conklin five pounds.

Item, I give unto Hannah the wife of Lion Gardiner, all the rest of my household goods.

Item, I give all my books of history and divinity to Mehitable Stratton, Hannah Gardiner, Abigail Conkling, and John Davis, equally.

Item, I give unto Mehitable Stratton the use of my new dwelling house and home lot for the term of one year after my decease, and also the use of the meadow at Accobounock that I have not given away, for the same term, and all the rest of my personal estate of whatever name or kind soever, not before given away, after my debts, legacies and funeral charges are paid. I give to be equally divided between John Davis, Jr., my nephew, and Mehitable Stratton my daughter-in-law.

Finally, I do hereby constitute and appoint my daughter-in-law Mehitable Stratton, my nephew John Davis, Jr., and my friends John Gardiner and Daniel Conkling, executors of this my last will and testament.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this thirtieth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and sixty three. JOHN DAVIS, I. S.

Signed, sealed, pronounced and declared by the said John Davis as his last will and testament in presence of us the subscribers. BERNIAH DAYTON, JEREMIAH CONKLING, JOHN CHATFIELD.

SUFFOLK Co., ss.

Be it remembered that on the eighth day of August, one thousand seven hundred and sixty six, personally came and appeared before me, Maltby Gelston, Surrogate of said County, Berniah Dayton, Hatter, and John Chatfield, Esq., both of said County, and being duly sworn on their oaths declared, that they and each of them did see John Davis sign and seal the within written instrument, purporting to be the will of the said John Davis, bearing date one thousand seven hundred and sixty three, and heard him publish and declare it to be and contain his last will and testament. That at the time thereof, he the said John Davis, was of sound disposing mind and memory, to the best knowledge and belief of them the deponents, and that their names subscribed to the said will are of their respective proper hand writing, which they subscribed as witnesses to the said will, in the testator's presence, and that they the deponents saw Jeremiah Conkling the other witness to the said will subscribe his name as a witness thereto in the testator's presence.

MALTBY GELSTON, Surrogate.

HANNAH DAVIS (2) was married Jan. 6, 1701, to Jonathan Baker, son of Nathaniel and Catharine (Schellinger) Baker, of Amagansett, town of E. Hampton, L. I., and grandson of Thomas and Alice Baker, who came to Amagansett from Milford, Conn., in 1650, and were among the first settlers of the town of E. Hampton. She died June 9, 1759, and was buried in the old South Burying Ground at E. Hampton. Her brother, John Davis, who died Aug. 3, 1766, is buried by her side. Their children were:

- | | | | |

| 6. | i. | David, | } twins, born Aug. 3, 1704. |
| 7. | ii. | Jonathan, | |

DAVID BAKER (6) was married, Feb. 23, 1726, to Esther Conklin, daughter of Elisha Conklin, of E. Hampton. They had one child:

8. i. Jacob, born Mar. 8, 1727.

JONATHAN BAKER (7) was married. Nov. 21, 1732, to Mary Talmage, daughter of John Talmage, of E. Hampton. Their children were:

9. i. Mary, who died in infancy.
10. ii. Jonathan, bap. Nov. 24, 1734.
11. iii. Thomas, bap. May 23, 1742.
12. iv. Temperance, bap. May 20, 1744.
13. v. William, bap. June 1, 1746.

THOMAS DAVIS (3) was married, Jan. 11, 1722, to Abigail Parsons. We have been unable to trace her ancestry, but she was doubtless a descendant of Samuel Parsons, one of the early settlers of E. Hampton. She died in Dec., 1745, aged 60 years. Thomas Davis was a merchant, as is proved by old account books and papers now in possession of his descendants of the 7th generation. He was known as "Lawyer Davis." He kept his store in what is known as the "Old Davis Homestead," at the north end of the village of E. Hampton. The old house is still standing, although removed from the location where it was erected. Their children were :

14. i. John, b. at E. Hampton, L. I., Mar. 4, 1723, d. at same place, Dec. 15, 1798.

15. ii. Abigail, b. at E. Hampton, L. I., April 26, 1725, d. at Amagansett, L. I., May 25th, 1795.

JOHN DAVIS (14) was married, 1st, Dec. 31, 1744, to Catherine Talmage, only child of Enos and Catherine (Baker) (Townsend) Talmage, of E. Hampton, L. I. Catherine Baker was a daughter of Nathaniel Baker, who was a son of Thomas Baker, one of the first settlers of E. Hampton. She was married, 1st, to Benjamin Townsend, June 15, 1715. They had one child who died at the age of three months. Benjamin Townsend died at Killingworth, Conn., July 31, 1716. His widow was married to Capt. Enos Talmage, of E. Hampton, L. I., Dec. 19, 1821. He died, April 3, 1723, aged 26 years. Their daughter Catherine, who married John Davis, jr. (14), was baptized Feb. 28, 1723. She died April 11, 1759. Benjamin Townsend, the first husband of Catherine Baker, was a carpenter by trade, (we have in our possession an account book that belonged to him, the first entry in which is Nov. 1707.) The children of John Davis and wife Catherine were :

16. i. Catherine, b. at E. Hampton, Mar. 13, 1746, d. at E. Hampton, April 3, 1754.

17. ii. John, b. at E. Hampton, L. I., Jan. 20, 1748, d. at Stonington, Conn., Mar. 31, 1809.

22. vii. } Catherine, b. at E. Hampton, L. I., April 5, 1758, d. at Stonington, Conn., July 18, 1831.

23. viii. } twins, Abigail, b. at E. Hampton, L. I., April 5, 1758, d. in infancy.

THE OLD DAVIS HOMESTEAD.

JOHN DAVIS (14) was a farmer and resided at E. Hampton, L. I. He carried on in connection with his farming, an extensive business in manufacturing leather, and shoe making. In 1765 he hired a farm in Stonington, Conn., which he afterwards purchased and put his oldest son John, then only seventeen years of age, in charge of it. He continued to reside at E. Hampton, still improving the farm at Stonington until 1772, when he purchased the farm and removed there with his family, where he resided until April 1784. The war being over, he returned to E. Hampton with the younger members of his family, that he might have better opportunities for educating them. Clinton Academy, the oldest institution of the kind in the State having been established about that time, and he desired to avail himself of the advantages that institution offered for the education of his children. His three sons, by 2d marriage, Samuel, Henry, and Benjamin, received their elementary education at Clinton Academy, and two of them, Henry and Benjamin, were teachers there for a time. While he resided in Stonington he carried on the business of manufacturing leather and shoe making in connection with his farming business, as he had done in E. Hampton. The farm that he purchased in Stonington, and which has been in the possession of his descendants since 1765, is beautifully situated on the right bank of the Pawcatuck River, the dividing line between Connecticut and Rhode Island, midway between the Borough of Westerly, R. I., and the celebrated summer resort and watering place, Watch Hill.

The old mansion house, a picture of which appears in this History, and the age of which no man living can tell, is worth making a pilgrimage to see. The spacious rooms, the carved work all done by hand, the staircase in the front hall of solid mahogany, also carved by hand, and imported from England, the spacious fire place in the kitchen, seven and a half feet high, all attract the attention of visitors. This fine old mansion has been the birth-place of four generations of the descendants of our ancestors, and at one time was occupied by three families of the fourth generation. Its walls, like those of many another old mansion, are mute witnesses of the joys, sorrows, and struggles of actual, and real life.

At the extreme south part of the "Old Davis Homestead" (as this is familiarly called,) jutting out into the Pawcatuck River is a promontory or headed woodland, which has long borne the name of

"Osbrook." Upon the opposite side of the river, facing the ocean, rises another headland. There is a tradition well sustained by facts, that these two promontories, before the pale face had robbed the red men of their heritage, were the camping grounds of two friendly tribes of Indians. One of the descendants of our ancestor, now one of the owners of the westerly part of the Old Homestead, has written the "Legend of Osbrook." At the urgent request of some of our kinsmen who have read the "Legend" and seeing no impropriety in it, we give it a place here, although it has no reference whatever to the historical, biographical or genealogical record of the descendants of our ancestor.

The Legend of Osbrook.

Where the winding Pawcatuck river
Flows on towards the mighty ocean ;
Where the bay that lies between them
Meets it with a gentle greeting ;
There, upon a rocky headland,
Stands the stately Grove of Osbrook.
Through the green and swaying branches
All the summer winds go singing,
And the leaves dance to the music,
Each one full of life and gladness.
Once this grove was broader, denser,
As a grand unbroken forest ;
Now the hand of man has severed
Many a monarch of that wildwood.
But though shorn of ancient grandeur,
It retains its queenly beauty.
There the wild birds woo each other,
Flitting 'neath the leafy arches,
And the sky so brightly smiling,
Bending low o'er stream and woodland,
Crown the scene with golden sunshine.

Long ago, beside that forest
Dwelt a tribe of valiant red men ;
And their wigwams, clustered closely
On the green slope by the river,
Opened towards the gates of sunrise,
The abode of their great spirit,
Whom they worshiped every morning.
They knew not the God we worship,
But they saw in all around them
A controlling power and wisdom
Which they sought in vain to fathom ;
And their darkened hearts looked upward,
Toward a form of something holy,
That should satisfy the longings
Of their nobler, better natures.

And they called their forest Fair Wood.
It was there they held their councils,
In the balmy summer weather,
Where the old men spake with wisdom,
And the young men sat and listened.

At the north end of the forest
They had formed a place for dancing ;
There, within the magic circle,
With rude instruments of music,

They would dance upon the greensward
With fantastic step and motion.
So they lived, those simple red men,
Happy in their life and freedom.

And their chieftain, Wyamoso,
Led them on the hunt and war-path ;
Kind was he to all his people,
And they loved him as a father.

He had sons, all brave young warriors,
But the bravest was Owanee,
Strong and fearless as the eagle,
With whose plumage he bedecked him ;
Yet he was as kind and gentle
As a maiden in his bearing.
And his father, Wyamoso,
Loved him best of all his children ;
And, when he should slumber lowly,
'Neath the grasses by the river,
Then Owanee would succeed him
As the ruler of his people.

On the other side the river
From the tribe of Wyamoso,
On the hills that face the ocean
Where it thunders on the shore,
Dwelt another tribe of red men.
Nahtowena was their chieftain,
And a friend of Wyamoso.
Nought of strife had come between them
Since the days when they were children.

Near the lodge of Nahtowena
Was a dainty little wigwam ;
In it dwelt his only daughter,
His own pet and pride, fair Osbrook.
She was even the loveliest maiden
To be found upon the border ;
She was as light and graceful
As a fawn, in every motion ;
Her tresses floated 'round her
Like a somber veil of midnight ;
And the flowers that she gathered,
Were not half so sweet and rosy
As her lips, that parted smiling
Over teeth of pearly whiteness.
And her starry eyes were shaded

By long and drooping lashes
That seemed loath to hide the brightness
And the joy that lurked beneath them.
Her life was free from sorrow,
And her heart was full of gladness,
For the brave Owanee loved her,
And his promised bride was Osbrook.
Oft at twilight she would wander
From her wigwam to the river,
Where, in her canoe of birch bark,
She would float down on the current.
Soon from off the shore at Fair Wood
There would shoot forth, like an arrow,
The canoe of young Owanee.
And he quickly plied the paddles
With a lover-like impatience,
And soon had greeted Osbrook
With a tender salutation.
And then the two fond lovers
Would float onward in the starlight,
Talking of the happy future
Which they hoped to spend together.

In the tribe of Nahtowena
Was a warrior named Menota,
He was crafty, stern, and cruel,
Yet he so disguised his nature
That he seemed to Nahtowena
To be good, and brave, and noble.
When he spake with words of council
The wise men gravely listened,
And whatever his decision
He was sure of their approval.
But Menota had a motive
As the basis of his greatness,
For he loved the beautiful Osbrook,
And he sought to win her favor;
But her love was true and constant
For the gallant young Owanee,
And she saw with fear and trembling
The true nature of his rival.
So with firm but gentle language
Told him that his love was hopeless,
That Owanee was her chosen.
While the angry suitor listened
To the answer of the maiden,
He with fierce and burning hatred
Planned revenge upon the lovers.
And from that time forth he often
Sought the lodge of Nahtowena,
Where with words of deadly cunning
He would warn the good old chieftain
That his ally, Wyamoso,
Had breathed threats and insults toward him
And was even then preparing
To surprise and slay his people.
Nahtowena, half in anger,
Half in sorrow, heard the traitor;
First he drove him from his presence,
Saying that his Wyamoso
Never would betray his friendship.
But Menota's fresh persuasions
Finally overcame his scruples,
And they planned a raid at midnight
On the tribe of Wyamoso.
And Menota's settled purpose
Was to kill his brave young rival,
So that Osbrook, broken-hearted,
Then would turn to him for comfort.
And his brutal soul exalted
O'er the coming scene of carnage.

It was past the hour of midnight,
When was heard a stir and bustle
In the camp of Nahtowena,
And Osbrook's quiet slumbers

Were broken by the pressure
Of a hand upon her forehead,
While a voice, in hurried whispers,
Told her of her lover's danger,
Of the massacre impending.
'Twas her faithful friend Baroona,
Who had hastened to her mistress
With this strange and dreadful story.
And without a word of answer,
Osbrook sprang up, quickly throwing
Her embroidered robe about her;
Sped silently and swiftly
Through a by-path to the river,
Where her light canoe lay rocking,
By the dim and quiet shore.
Pausing not, except to sever
With her knife the thong of deer-skin,
In the small craft light she bounded;
Soon was mid-way of the river.

Then she saw her father's warriors,
Score of dusky, stalwart figures,
Flocking down upon the shore;
And a voice came o'er the water,
Stern, commanding in its accents,
Bidding her to halt and answer
Whether she were friend or foe.
But, with firm-set lips unyielding,
Faster still she plied the paddle.
Then the same voice, hoarse with passion,
Shouted, "Take this from Menota!"
And an arrow hissed and quivered.
For an instant through the air,
Then, with aim so fierce and deadly,
Plunged deep into Osbrook's bosom;
And she fell back with her life-blood
Ebbing in a tide of crimson.
And her brain reeled with the faintness
That so quickly overcame her,
And her vision grew so misty
She could not see around her—
Could not see the angry warriors
Every moment coming nearer;
For they did not know that Osbrook
Was the one who braved such perils,
Still they thought her sleeping soundly
In her wigwam, free from danger.
And that some one of their number
Had turned traitor to his brethren.
But the challenge of Menota
Roused the foe to the defensive.
By the pale and fitful moonlight
That through clouds shone down upon them
They could see across the river
All the war canoes advancing.
But nearer to the shore
Was a small canoe, containing
One person, that a woman.
Her strokes were slow and feeble,
And her graceful form was drooping.
It was Osbrook, who had rallied
While the hand of death was on her,
And she murmured in her anguish,
"O, my love, my own Owanee,
Must I die thus, and so near you,
With my mission half accomplished?"
Then with all her strength she paddled
To the friendly shore of Fair Wood
And Owanee saw her coming—
He knew that it was Osbrook—
And with sad and dark forebodings
Hastened down to meet her;
When he saw the fatal arrow,
Knew that his beloved was dying;
Then with horror and amazement,
For a moment he stood spellbound.

But when Osbrook saw him near her,
 Heard his words of love and pity,
 As he lifted her so gently,
 Bore her up the sloping hillside,
 Laid her 'mid the grass and flowers,
 Then she threw her arms around him,
 And with utterance low and broken,
 Told him of the plan of vengeance,
 And that her secret errand
 Was to save him and his people ;
 And she pointed to the arrow,
 Saying, " This came from Menota ;
 But I welcome death, if only
 I have saved you, my Owanee." .
 She drew his face down closer,
 Pressed one lingering kiss upon it,
 And her spirit fled forever.
 Sadly there he knelt beside her
 But no tear or groan escaped him,
 For his heart was filled with anguish
 All too deep to find expression.
 Then he left her with the women
 While he went to join his people,
 For the dreadful sounds of battle
 Echoed through the forest treetops,
 That were moaning as in sorrow.
 And Owanee pressed on boldly
 Where the fight was raging fiercest.
 Long he battled, while the war-whoop
 And the death-cry rung around him,
 And his tall form was a target
 In the flush of coming morning,
 For the arrows of Menota.
 All in vain Owanee sought him,
 'Till at last he spied him skulking
 With arrow pointed toward him.
 But before his bowstring tightened,
 Owanee poised an arrow,
 And his voice rang like a trumpet,
 Louder than the noise of battle :
 " Traitor ! you have slain my Osbrook,
 And 'tis thus that I avenge her."
 At the words he sped his arrow,
 Sure and fatal, toward Menota.
 And his people saw him falling,
 Heard the loud words of Owanee,
 And they with their chieftain faltered.

Then they knew that it was Osbrook
 Who had crossed the lonely river,
 And their ancient superstitions
 Told them her death was fateful.

So they broke their ranks and scattered
 In the wildest of confusion ;
 And their chieftain Nahtowena
 Found himself a helpless captive.
 Then Owanee, faint and bleeding,
 Bade his warriors haste to lay him
 On the ground beside his Osbrook.
 And he summoned there his father,
 With the captive Nahtowena,
 Who wept in fear and sorrow
 Beside his lifeless daughter.
 Then spake Owanee gently,
 Unto the sorrowing chieftain :
 " You have sought to slay our people,
 But no cause had you for vengeance.
 And I ask you, Nahtowena,
 To make peace now with my father ;
 Clasp each other's hands and promise,
 Here beside the dead and dying.
 And, my father, let this spot be Known no longer here as Fair Wood ;
 Call it Osbrook, in remembrance
 Of the maiden who so bravely
 Gave her life this night to save us.
 Now the great Good Spirit calls me
 To the hunting grounds so happy,
 And I die here by my Osbrook."
 Then the chiefs, in solemn silence,
 Clasped their strong right hands together
 In forgiveness and in promise.
 And the first bright rays of sunlight
 Shone down upon Owanee
 Lying dead beside his Osbrook.

And they buried them together
 Near the borders of the forest.
 The south winds chanted requiems,
 And the clouds dropped tears above them,
 Who in life had loved each other,
 And in death were not divided.

Westerly, Aug 1.

THE last will and testament of John Davis (14) who was born March 4, 1723, died Dec. 15, 1798.

In the Name of God, Amen. I, John Davis of the town of Stonington, County of New London, in the State of Connecticut, in New England, being in health of body, and perfect mind and memory, through the great goodness of God, calling to mind my mortality, knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do ordain this to be my last will and testament. My body I give to the Earth, to be buried in a christian manner, at the discretion of my Executors, hereinafter named, in the firm belief of the resurrection of the dead. My soul I commit into the hands of God who gave it to me, to be redeemed by His Son, Jesus Christ, to be sanctified by His Spirit, and made meet for the sight and enjoyment of Himself. As to that portion of worldly good things, wherewith God had been pleased to endow me, I will and dispose of the same in manner and form following;

Imprimis. I give to my dear beloved wife Mary, one third part of my household goods, and the improvement of one third of my real estate in said Stonington, during her natural life, and during her widowhood. I give her the improvement of my great house in E. Hampton, on Long Island, the keeping of a cow, and what firewood she shall need, and if after my debts and funeral charges are paid out of my stock of horses and cattle and sheep, any should remain, I give her one third part of them to dispose of as she pleases.

Item, I give to my beloved son, John, to his heirs and assigns, the house and barn and lands which belonged to Col. Abraham Gardiner; And as to the farm on which I live, and which formerly belonged to Robert Stanton, deceased, I judge it to be worth two thousand pounds, lawful money, and give it to be divided among my children (excepting Henry) in the following proportion, that is to say:

Item, I give to my said son, John, to his heirs and assigns forever, three twentieth parts of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to three hundred pounds lawful money. I also give him all my farming utensils.

Item, I give to my beloved son, Thomas, his heirs and assigns forever, one fifth part, and one fortieth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to four hundred and fifty pounds lawful money.

Item, I give to my beloved son, Enos, his heirs and assigns forever, one fifth part, and one fortieth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to four hundred and fifty pounds lawful money.

Item, I give to my beloved daughter, Katherine, (over and above what I have already given her), and to her heirs and assigns forever, a twentieth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to one hundred pounds of lawful money. And my will is, notwithstanding my other bequeathments, that if said Katherine is, or does become a widow, she shall have during her widowhood, the use of the East chamber of my dwelling house, and as much privilege as she shall need in the kitchen and cellar, also a suitable supply of apples, and three cords of walnut wood, cut and carted to the door by my sons John, Thomas, and Enos.

Item, I give to my beloved daughter, Mary, her heirs and assigns forever, a twentieth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to one hundred pounds lawful money, and also two beds with furniture.

Item, I give to my beloved son, Samuel, his heirs and assigns forever, one tenth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon to be worth two hundred pounds lawful money, and my will is that my son Thomas, and my son Enos, shall each of them pay twenty pounds lawful money, within a year after my decease, to their brother Samuel, and that my son, Henry, when he arrives at the age of twenty one years, shall pay fifty pounds lawful money to his brother Samuel.

Item, I give to my beloved daughter, Abigail, to her heirs and assigns forever, one twentieth part of said farm, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to one hundred pounds lawful money, and also two beds with furniture.

Item, I give to my beloved son, Henry, to his heirs and assigns forever, all my lands with buildings thereon, in E. Hampton, Long Island, he allowing to his honored mother the privilege therein which I have given her.

Item, I give to my beloved son, Benjamin, three twentieth parts of the farm on which I now live, including the buildings thereon, which I reckon equal to three hundred pounds lawful money. Moreover, whatever remains of household furniture, of stock in my trade, of horses, sheep and cattle, and swine, I give to be divided between my sons, John, Thomas, and Enos, and their sister, Katherine, in equal parts, together with my son, Samuel.

I hereby constitute and appoint my beloved son, John, and my trusty and well-beloved friend, Mr. John Stanton, executors of this my last will and testament, revoking and making void all former wills and testaments.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this fifth day of April, Anno,

Domini, 1784, and of the eighth year of American Independence.

JOHN DAVIS. L. S.

Signed, sealed, declared and pronounced to be my last will and testament, in presence of PELEG SHAW, SAMUEL WATERS, ALEXANDER BRADFORD, JR.

The above and foregoing will of John Davis, (14) is recorded in the Surrogate's office at Riverhead, Suffolk Co., N. Y.

[To answer any questions that may arise, as to why the foregoing will, made and executed in Stonington, New London County, in the State of Connecticut, in New England, and recorded in the Surrogate's office, Riverhead, Suffolk Co., N. Y., we will state that soon after making his will John Davis removed from Stonington to E. Hampton, Suffolk Co., L. I., where he died Dec. 18, 1798.]

JOHN DAVIS (17) was married Nov. 14, 1773, to Abigail Baker. She was the only daughter of Daniel Baker, Jr., and wife Mary (Dayton) (Conklin) Baker, of E. Hampton, L. I. She died at Stonington, Conn., Jan. 23, 1831. Daniel Baker, Jr., was married, 1st, to Mary Osborn, of E. Hampton, June 24, 1736. She died, and he was married, 2d, to Mary (Dayton) Conklin, widow of Jeremiah Conklin, Aug. 27, 1749. Mary Dayton was married to Jeremiah Conklin, Dec. 21, 1741. He died July 21, 1746, aged twenty-seven years. Daniel Baker, Jr., was a descendant in a direct ancestral line, in the 4th generation, of Thomas Baker, one of the early settlers of E. Hampton. The generations are as follows: 1st generation, Thomas Baker, and wife, Alice; 2nd generation, Nathaniel (son of Thomas) and wife, Catherine (Schellinger) Baker; 3rd generation, Daniel (son of Nathaniel) and wife, Abigail Osborn; 4th generation, Daniel Baker, Jr., and wife, Mary Dayton (Conklin) Baker, parents of Abigail Baker, who married John Davis (17). Mary Dayton was a descendant in a direct ancestral line in the 4th generation of Ralph Dayton, also one of the first settlers of E. Hampton. The generations are as follows: 1st generation, Ralph Dayton; 2d generation, Robt. Dayton; 3d generation, Ralph Dayton; 4th generation, Mary, who married Daniel Baker, Jr. The wife of Nathaniel Baker, of the 2d generation, was Catherine Schellinger, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Melin) Schellinger. Catherine Melin was the only daughter of Cornelius Melin, who came to this country from Holland in 1639, and in 1640 received from the Dutch Government a grant for the whole of Staten Island, N. Y., (see Valentine's History of N. Y., p. 140). Daniel Baker, Jr., died Jan. 17, 1753.

The following account of his death by drowning, with two other men, is from an ancient document, which in 1753 was in the possession of Thomas J. Mulford, of E. Hampton: "E. Hampton, Jan. 17, 1753. At the south side, in coming to the shore in a whale boat, was drowned in the surf, three men, namely,—Jacob Schellinger, Daniel Baker, Jr., and Dick. The night before Daniel Baker was drowned his wife dreamed the tide rose so high that it came up to the house, burst open the door and brought in a coffin. She requested him not to go off whaling that day. She said she was afraid some accident would happen. He replied that he thought he would go that day, but would not go any more." The children of John Davis and wife Abigail Baker were :

- 24. i. John, b. Sept. 19, 1776, d. April 21, 1864.

All born at the Old Homestead in Stonington, Conn., and all died in Stonington, except Nancy, who died in Trenton, N. Y.

JOHN DAVIS (24) was married Feb. 27, 1804, to Sally Stanton, of Stonington, Conn. She was a daughter of William and Sarah (Breed) Stanton, of Stonington, Conn., and granddaughter on the maternal side of John and Mary Breed, of the same town. She was a descendant on the paternal side in a direct ancestral line, in the sixth generation, of Thomas Stanton, who was born in England, and came to this country in 1635. In 1637 he married Anna, daughter of Dr. Thomas and Dorothy Lord, a noble English family of Hartford, Conn., and there resided until 1650, when he came to Stonington.

He was the 2d white settler in the town, Wm. Chesebough being the first. In 1638 he was appointed by the General Court interpreter General of the New England Colonies; also Commissioner to try criminal and civil cases, which offices he held until the year before his death, which occurred in 1678. The generations from Thomas the ancestor to Sarah, who married John Davis, are as follows: 1st generation, Thomas Stanton and wife Anna Lord; 2d generation, Thomas Stanton, Jr., who married Sarah, daughter of the famed Capt. George Denison and wife Bridget (Thompson) Denison; 3d generation, William Stanton, who married Anna, daughter of Robert Stanton, and wife Joanna (Gardner) Stanton; 4th generation, Thomas Stanton, who married Elizabeth Bell, daughter of William Bell; 5th generation, William Stanton, who married Sarah, daughter of John and Mary Breed, of Stonington; 6th generation, Sarah, daughter of William and Sarah above, who married John Davis

All born at the Old Homestead in Stonington.

John Davis succeeded to the ownership of that part of the ancestral estate that had been owned and occupied by his father for more than half a century. From early manhood he had been a humble consistent christian, and for many years a member of the Congregational Church at Westerly, R. I., and his daily life and conversation bore witness to the truth and sincerity of his profession. He delighted to minister to the wants of those whose individual necessities appealed to his generous sympathy, and gave willingly for charitable and benevolent objects, demonstrating the truth of the Divine saying,—“It is more blessed to give than to receive.” Being himself the soul of honor he looked for the same quality in others, and was unwilling to impute dishonesty or deceit to any one. Quiet and unassuming in his ways, yet his manifest goodness and geniality attracted even strangers to him. He always had a smile and encouraging word to cheer the troubled and despondent. He never seemed happier than when doing or planning something to contribute to the pleasure of others. He was an affectionate and indulgent husband and father, a kind neighbor, and in the language of one who knew him well,—“a good man.” In the evening of life, with his work on earth well done, he has entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God. “The memory of the just is blessed.”

We cheerfully give place to the following tributes of respect to his memory, the first from the pen of Rev. A. H. Wilcox, some time pastor of the Church at Westerly, R. I., of which he was a member; the second from one who had known him long and well.

“My memory of Mr. Davis is perfectly fresh and distinct, and will continue to be so, so long as I live. I can see him now, just as he looked on bright Sabbath mornings, as he drove up to the steps of the Church, then a hale and strong man, with the color of health in his cheeks, and his whole countenance beaming with an expression of hearty good will to all around. I remember distinctly his readiness to converse on religious subjects, and especially on any subject connected with the promotion of more christian feeling among church members, and my memory would be deficient indeed, if I failed to remember that no one ever gave me a more kindly welcome to his home, or pressed upon me a more cordial hospitality. In a word, if all our New England farms could be tilled by such men as he was, our New England churches would be full to overflowing, and instead of modern vices and irreligion, we should have again the sterling virtues and piety of former days.”

REV. A. H. WILCOX.

In memory of John Davis,

Died April 9, 1884.

A rounded life, and full of days,
Like ripened wheat,
Symmetrical in all his ways;
Not wanting aught to merit praise—
A life full and complete.

A busy life, no wasted hours
He ever knew.
No moments but with all his powers,
His hands culled out life's choicest flowers,
Among the chosen few.

A frugal life, enough had he
For present need,
And answer claims of charity.
No waste of substance could he see,
Yet had he naught of greed.

Westerly, R. I., April 25, 1884.

A humble life, no tinsel show
Could e'er allure
His simple ways aside to go.
Contented walked he to and fro—
In honest worth and pure.

A christian life in saving trust,
Believing, true;
The promised guerdon of the just—
He gave to God the best and first,
His faithful spirit knew.

And so he laid him down to rest,
From labor free;
Assured that on his Savior's breast,
Reposing there among the blest,
Would spend eternity.

Unseen except by Him alone,
What in domestic gardens grow,
A mother's sacrifice and love,
The truest witnesses here below.

Sweet as the rose of Sharon's lea,
This mother graced a christian home,
And left to all a memory
Full freighted with its rich perfume.

She lived to make the world more bright,
Amid earth's clouds a radiant star,
And though now absent from our sight,
She shines beyond the gates ajar.

WILLIAM DUDLEY DAVIS (60) met his death by drowning, Nov. 30, 1866. The major part of the last four years of his life was spent on the water, voyaging from Providence and Newport to New York and Albany, and places adjacent to these. During the summer of 1866, he was first officer on board the schooner T. R. Becket, under Capt. William S. Robinson, as he had been the previous season. The Capt. held him as more than an officer, even as a brother. It was during the last voyage of the season in that vessel that he met his death. While descending the Hudson River in Newburg Bay, on a squally day, Nov. 30, 1866, near 2 o'clock in the afternoon, as he was assisting in reefing the mainsail, the violent stroke of the wind-smitten canvass hurled him into the sea. He was thickly clad, yet a good swimmer. Probably the severe blow of the sail partly paralyzed him, so that he was unable to keep himself up until the boat that was instantly lowered and pulled to his relief could reach him. The Hudson became his shroud and grave, the beautiful Highlands are his tomb-stones. Unavailing were the many and long continued efforts to recover his body.* Thus he passed away in the 24th year of his age.

"His absorbing work was to secure a well proportioned christian character, and thus prepare for a future state. He aimed not for wealth or honors, or name. His one controlling desire was to be an approved child of Christ. His treasure was in Heaven, hence he yearned to be pure, to promote piety, to glorify Christ, and so be in readiness to enter the world of light and holiness. His spirit was plumed for a heavenward flight, death only unloosed his pinions."

"Our brother reached the land for which he voyaged, the home he looked for, the society for which he panted. He achieved the highest work of man, attained the highest end of his existence. His life was hid with Christ in God. He held membership and heirship in the Divine family. He dropped earthly ambitions for a celestial one. He let go earth's gold for Heaven's glory. Triumphantly has he joined the holy family. His works follow him, and he is rich forever. He is at rest, honored and crowned as a victor through Christ. Was he not ripe for the better state? It was noon with him. His work was done. Our thoughts aspire to tender measures, as we pronounce."

The Farewell.

Afar from the circle his presence had gladdened,
He sleeps in the beautiful shroud of the sea;
The bosoms of kindred and brethren are saddened,
Yet cheered by the truth that his spirit is free.

No more may the billows of life overtake him,
Released from temptations and struggles with wrong;
No tumults or tempests of earth may awake him,
Triumphant on high with the glorified throng.

Loved brother, we sing of thy life-voyage ended,
Thy earth-robe laid off for thy heaven-woven crown,
Thy voice is celestial companionship blended,
Thy harp of devotion laid never more down.

Our bodies the earth and the sea shall surrender,
When Jesus, in judgment, shall call for their trust;
Nor distance, nor mountains, nor oceans may hinder,
The blood-bought of God from reclaiming their dust.

O blissful that meeting of glorified spirits,
United, as one, in the heavenly home,
Made holy and perfect in Jesus' full merits,
No more from the Eden celestial to roam.

Then on let us press in the footsteps of Jesus,
Our bosoms aglow with the flame of his love,
Our eyes on the kingdom and crown he decrees us,
Our songs sweet rehearsals for glory above.

The foregoing extracts are from the sermon delivered at the funeral of William Dudley Davis, May 12, 1867, by Rev. Frederick Denison.

In this recognition of the death of our associate Trustee and friend, we record our sincere regard and gratitude, for the long useful and efficient service he rendered, and our testimony to the unflinching honesty of the man over whose long and useful life the grave has forever closed.

Resolved.—That a copy of the foregoing be placed on file, transmitted to the family of our deceased associate Trustee, with the assurance of our sympathy in their affliction, and also be published in the local newspapers.

WILLIAM LONEW, Treasurer.

HENRY P. HEDGES, President.

The following tribute to the memory and worth of Mr. Tiffany is from a life long friend:

“N. N. Tiffany whose death at his late residence is recorded, had been one of the most respected and prosperous merchants of Sag Harbor, and afterwards at Bridgehampton, in both of which places he held the position of Postmaster. A man of the most sterling rectitude of character and conduct, of a kindly disposition, truthful and reliable in all his dealings, staunch in his friendships, and unwavering in his fidelity to convictions of duty, he commanded esteem, and won confidence from all with whom he was brought in contact. But for his own modest diffidence, he might have figured prominently in public affairs. On the grave of this honored and true friend of our youth and our family, we can do no less than cast this little chaplet of our regard."

PAUL SMITH PALMER was a descendant in a direct ancestral line, in the seventh generation, of Walter Palmer, who came to this country from England in 1629. After residing at different places in Mass., he came to Stonington, Conn., in 1653, where he died in 1662. The line of descent from Walter Palmer the ancestor to Paul Smith Palmer is as follows: 1st generation, Walter Palmer; 2d generation, Nehemiah Palmer; 3d generation, Judge Daniel Palmer; 4th generation, Doct. Nathan Palmer; 5th generation, Capt. Andrew Palmer; 6th generation, Capt. Roswell Saltonstall Palmer; 7th generation, Paul Smith Palmer, who married Hannah Eells Palmer.

The following tribute to the memory of Paul Smith Palmer is from an old friend and neighbor of his, who had known him many years :

Paul Smith Palmer was born in Stonington, Conn., Nov. 11, 1796. His father, (one of the noblest of the name, still abounding in that town,) was a Revolutionary soldier, and one of the relics of the "Old Jersey Prison Ship." He emigrated to Berkshire while his son Paul was still young, and purchased what was then called the "Judge Bacon Place," containing four hundred and twenty-five acres on the table land, about one and a half miles north of the village of Stockbridge. After his death in 1844, the farm was divided between his two sons, Paul and Dwight. Paul returned to Stonington in 1824, took him a wife from "among the daughters of his kindred," his cousin Miss Hannah Eells Palmer, and came back to Stockbridge to settle down to a long and happy life, which ended suddenly and peacefully March 24, 1875. Mr. Palmer was an eminent specimen of the best type of New England yeomanry. Active, enterprising and intelligent, he managed his affairs with a skill which secured him an abundant competence, and made his farm a model one in Berkshire. Himself and his excellent consort were distinguished for their hospitality, and the kindness wherewith it was always dispensed is a fragrant and enduring memory in all those who have ever shared it. Mr. Palmer possessed an independence of thought and bearing equally removed from hauteur and obsequiousness. His opinions were his own, and he dared to express them at all times. This procured him the confidence of his fellow citizens, by whom he was honored with offices and positions of trust. And the inflexible honesty in the performance of his duties was shown without faltering or failure. He was alike true to his religious instincts, honoring his God, and abounding in charity towards his fellow men. No household was fuller of uniform happiness than his, the aim of the devoted pair being with conscientious discipline, cordial sympathy, and judicious management, to make their children competent to derive, and to communicate joy and benefaction in their pathway through life. Nine offspring blessed their union, of whom only three at this time survive. Many hearts in Berkshire still cherish refreshing memories of the worth and virtues of Paul S. and Hannah E. Palmer.

• Died, at Stockbridge, March 13, 1882, Mrs. Hannah Palmer, aged 77 years.

“Dear, good Mrs. Palmer!”—is the exclamation universally following the mention of the decease of this excellent lady, by our citizens. No woman has better deserved such testimony, and no monument that may rise above her place of rest can better commemorate her. No community can spare such members without sorrow, and a feeling of impoverishment. Mrs. Palmer was born in Stonington, Conn., in the year 1804. Her bright and joyous girlhood ripened into the tempered vivacity which she brought with her to her adopted residence here, and radiated like sunshine from her home to all who were blessed with her acquaintance. In 1824, she married Mr. Paul S. Palmer, moved to this town and commenced a life-long career of love and usefulness. The family residence on the upland north of our village became proverbial for good cheer, hospitality and happiness. Her husband was an intelligent, courteous and independent farmer, preaching by his own example the “dignity of labor.” When Lord Morpeth visited our town in 1842, for larger knowledge of the modes of American life, he was taken to Mr. Palmer’s as a place affording a most favorable specimen of the American farmer and domestic management. Nor did it fail of proper appreciation, of which the genial, lady-like mistress came in for a full share. Mrs. Palmer was the soul of sympathy and helpfulness. Her charity knew no sectarianism, and “the blessing of Him that was ready to perish” was always hers. The victims of misfortune found in her an invaluable ally. All children loved her as a mother. Her words of kindness and deeds of beneficence brought cheer to the distressed, her hand was ever efficacious to smooth the pillow of pain, and the remedials suggested by her rich experience often proved more efficacious than those of the physician. There could be no despondency when and where she was present. To her last days she could equally well entertain those of her own age and the gayest of the young. The natural sedateness of years was remarkably tempered by an inborn cheerfulness which prompted her—not to withdraw from social pleasures, but rather to promote them by a geniality which made her presence agreeable to old and young. Her well-stored mind, large experience and interesting conversational powers rendered her a model guest and hostess. The death of her husband, in 1875, dampened but could not subdue her inherent cheerfulness; while it brightened the christian faith which dominated all her faculties, and enhanced her sympathy toward general humanity. A son and a widowed daughter remained in her stricken home whose loving devotion to her in her increasing years, augmented by that of another son's family, occupying the adjoining farm, (three only surviving of nine children) and numerous grandchildren, all of whom almost worshipped her, rendered life still desirable and happy. Here, finally, after a brief illness, death overtook her in full-possession of her mental powers, though at the ripe age of 77 years, and closed her eyes on earth to be opened on the glories of the better land. Such a life in any community is a golden example and a benediction, and the loss of it can only be recompensed by the assurance of eternal reward to the one who lived it.

"She set as sets the morning star, that goes
Not down behind the darkened west, nor hides
Obscured among the tempests of the sky,
But melts away into the light of heaven."

Stockbridge, March 25, 1882.

E. W. B. CANNING.

Extract from a sermon preached in Stockbridge the Sunday following Mrs. Paul Palmer's funeral, March 19th, 1882 :

"We have laid this week out of our sight, one of the sweetest and best of our number—one who for more than fifty years has been the centre and the sunlight of that best of all things on earth—a Christian home. One whose clear wisdom, whose gentle nature, whose loving heart have drawn to her the tender respect and tender affection of every one she knew. Was the tender smile which was ever on her lips inconsistent with an humble spirit? was the cheerfulness with which she welcomed those who turned to her—and never in vain—for sympathy or greeting, out of keeping with a heart that had been sanctified by sorrow and acquainted with grief. Psalm 51, 16:17."

The following tribute to the memory of Miss Harriet Jane Palmer (123), is from the pen of Rev. Paul Couch, who was for many years her friend and Pastor :

Miss Harriet Jane Palmer, the daughter of Alden and Nancy

Davis (Palmer) Palmer, was naturally of a bright, sprightly and cheerful disposition, with those constitutional elements, which cherished and cultured, would give her a prominent rank in gay and fashionable life. When she BELIEVED, she became a christian by that faith which is the gift of God, and by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, her natural vivacity and cheerfulness were not changed, but the aim and habit of her life were changed. She did not become an ascetic, but a sensible, warm hearted christian. She was not of a sad countenance, but was as cheerful as ever. She gave herself to Christ, consecrating all that she was and had to His service. She made a profession of religion, and united with the first Congregational Church in Stonington, June 6, 1858, and to the day of her death made good her profession by her consistent life. She was a christian at home. She carried her religion into the every day concerns of the family, and aimed to make home a "sweet home," and in it she was not only one, but a centre of power, quick and vigorous in mind, to devise and carry forward measures of utility and enjoyment. She died very suddenly, and when her work was done, and she was called to go up higher, her family had only time to say "She is gone."

MARIA DAVIS (27) was married Sept. 1808, to Benjamin Franklin Stanton, youngest son of Job Stanton and wife Annie (Williams) (Bell) Stanton, and was born Feb. 25, 1782. His mother Annie (Williams) (Bell) Stanton was a daughter of Nathaniel and Annie (Hewitt) Williams, and a sister of the wife of Col. William Ledyard, who commanded the troops at Fort Griswold, Groton, Conn., in the memorable battle of Sept. 6, 1781, and was killed with his own sword, in the hands of a British officer after the surrender of the fort. Benjamin Franklin Stanton was a descendant in a direct ancestral line, in the fourth generation, of Robert Stanton, who was born in England in 1599, came to this country in 1638 with his wife Avis, and settled at Newport, where he resided until his death, Aug. 5, 1672. The line of descent from Robert the ancestor to Benjamin Franklin, who married Maria Davis is as follows: 1st generation, Robert Stanton and wife Avis; 2d generation, John Stanton, born April 22, 1673, son of Robert. Y., where he carried on an extensive farming business until 1823, when he returned to Stonington, Conn., and occupied a farm which he had previously purchased, where he resided until his death, Dec. 13, 1836. Besides farming, he was largely engaged in other pursuits, by which he accumulated a competency. He was highly esteemed as a man and neighbor, and was a kind and indulgent husband and father. A lady who visited at his home a few weeks before his death, said not long ago, "I well remember our visit to Mr. Stanton's home a few weeks before his death, and the kind and hospitable manner in which we were entertained by him and his estimable wife." The children of Benjamin Franklin Stanton and wife Maria Davis were:

ABBY JANE WILLIAMS (154) was married to Charles A. Jones, in New York City, June 5, 1878. He was born April 11, 1824, and is a descendant in a direct line, in the fifth generation, of William Jones the ancestor, who married Betsey Walker, as follows: 1st generation, William Jones, who married Betsey Walker; 2d generation, William Jones, Jr., who married Margaret Huster; 3d generation, Robert Jones, who married Martha Day; 4th generation, William Jones, who married Jane McFadden; 5th generation, Charles A. The arms of Jones,—Argent, a lion rampant, vert.,—granted June 11, 1607, in the fifth year of the reign of James I., to William Jones, of Deubigshire, North-Wales. He was rewarded for his services with a grant of land in the Parish of Ballymoney, Ireland, near Londonderry.

158. i. Their only and infant child died Sept. 1871.

The five sons of Benjamin F. Stanton, and wife Maria Davis, have been associated in business since the death of their father, Dec. 13, 1836. They have added largely to the landed estate left them by their father, and their farming business is conducted upon an extensive scale. By their honesty and uprightness in business matters, they have established an enviable and widely known reputation. They are highly respected in the community where they have lived all their lifetime. None of them have ever held public office, except Benjamin Franklin, who has held many offices of honor and trust in his native town, and has several times represented the town in the State Legislature.

MARIA STANTON (150) was born on Fishers Island, N. Y., December 30, 1819. In 1823 her father removed with his family to Stonington, Conn., where his children, five sons and four daughters, grew up. Early in life Miss Stanton developed the independence which has ever been a leading trait of her character.

Mr. Stanton was the owner of a large farm, and Maria grew up in an atmosphere of freedom. The confidence which she always manifested did not come so much from being thrown on her own resources as from the fact that her ancestors were of the broad, whole-souled New England type, having come to this country from England in the year 1640, and settled in Newport, R. I.

Like that of most New England country girls, Miss Stanton's early life was uneventful, each day as it glided by, leaving its impress on the character of the young girl. Quick to learn, and not content until she had gained a thorough understanding of the lesson before her; this, coupled with a retentive memory, helped to lay the foundation for future usefulness.

Years passed on, the farm as well as the family had grown larger, and two of the brothers determined to leave the old homestead and make to themselves another home, and who so well fitted to assist in the new departure as this sister, reliant and reliable? Two weeks was to be the limit of her stay, but her twenty-second birthday found her in the house which was ever after to be her home. She united with the first Congregational Church of Stonington, Conn., Dec. 4, 1842, and up to the hour of her death was closely identified with its history. From a child she had been in the Sunday-school as a scholar, teacher, librarian, or treasurer, holding the three last offices at her death. In October, 1874, the bi-centennial of this church was celebrated, and as she was one of the two corresponding secretaries of the committee of arrangements, the success of the enterprise was in a great measure due to her efforts, an acknowledgment of which she received in the form of an elegant silver tea service and coffee urn, bearing besides an engraving of the church, an inscription in acknowledgment of her life-long services thereto.

But it was not only on occasions like this that her ability was shown. Possessed of a warm and tender nature, the tale of sorrow always found a responsive cord in her heart, and the poor and the needy were never turned empty away, nor the sick left to languish ; and though the history of these deeds cannot be told, yet over against her name will be written in the Lamb's Book of Life, " In as much as you have done it unto the least of one of these, you have done it unto me."

We have said that a characteristic of the girl was to learn all she could about whatever she attempted ; this trait grew with her growth, and the result was that Miss Stanton was well-informed upon every subject which had claimed her attention, which made her a pleasant hostess and visitor, and a delightful traveling companion.

In 1859 Miss Stanton was appointed Lady Manager of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union, for New London County, to raise money to purchase the house and grave of Washington ; therefore she felt a special interest in visiting Mount Vernon with the party of Temperance ladies from the Baltimore Convention in 1878. It was due to her efforts that the tree was planted near the grave of Washington at that time.

Miss Stanton was so well known as an organizer, and so familiar with the history of New London County, that a pledge of her assistance in commemorating its historical days was a guaranty of success. At the time of her death she was one of a committee to arrange for the great centennial commemoration of the " Battle and the Massacre of Fort Griswold," and at its last meeting, January 14th, a resolution appropriate to her death was passed.

Though a life-long temperance woman, Miss Stanton had taken no active part in Temperance work till after the Crusade, but true to herself, when the call came she responded, and in the Fall of 1875, went with many another newly awakened woman to the second convention of the Connecticut Woman's Christian Temperance Union, where she became a member, and was Vice-President for New London County. She was a delegate from her State to the national conventions which met in Baltimore and Indianapolis. In May, 1879, she went with the Sunday-school excursion party to California, and returning late in the Summer, at the urgent request of her towns people she gave an account of her trip in a lecture, under the auspices of the Mystic W. C. T. U., repeating it in Mystic Bridge. Miss Stanton was a great lover of nature, and her description of the sights along the line of travel, the incidents, and the people, were not only interesting but instructive.

At the annual convention of 1879 she was elected President of the State Union. Soon after her election she became aware of the presence of the disease which was to terminate her usefulness, but always hopeful, she did not feel that the end was yet near, and with all the strength of her cheerful and energetic nature she battled for life.

The morning of the first day of the State Annual Convention of 1880 came, but the President's chair was vacant still. When the election of officers occurred, Miss Stanton was unanimously re-elected, and many were the prayers that God would spare her life yet a little longer. But He who "doeth all things well," had another purpose. He who (as she was wont to say) never makes mistakes, called her away from earth to "come up higher," and serve Him in His immediate presence. She died Sunday, Dec. 5, 1880. "Though dead she yet speaketh." A marked characteristic and habit of hers was a generous sympathy with the afflicted, and abundant, kind and judicious ministrations for their relief. Quick to hear, of a tender heart, and a helping hand, she was at home in the families tried and saddened by sickness, pain and bereavement. Any call for help had a quick response. But she did not wait to be called. She was in scenes of suffering and sorrow in fulfillment of a ministry which she had received of the Lord Jesus, to raise up the bowed down, to comfort those who mourn, to bind up the broken hearted, to soothe the aching head, and wipe away the falling tear. She was really a sister of charity, a Dorcas in good works. Her mind and heart seemed to enlarge with her opportunities, and her future to grow bright with promise.

NANCY DAVIS STANTON (159) was married Oct. 20, 1835, to Warren D. Rowly, son of Asher and Mehitabel (Dunham) Rowly, of Winsted, Conn., where he was born June 20, 1800. He died at So. Trenton, N. Y., Sept. 5, 1854. His wife died Feb. 17, 1837. They had one child.

168. i. Nancy Davis Rowly, b. at So. Trenton, Feb. 11, 1837, d. at same place, Nov. 15, 1846.

A tribute to the memory and worth of Mrs. Nancy Davis (Stanton) Rowley, from a dear friend:

"But although dead she yet speaketh in our memories, and is cherished in our recollections. Nor is it in the power of mortals to deprive us of this consoling reflection. To what kindness, to what affection was her heart ever a stranger. I would bear testimony to her virtues, to her inestimable fine and tender feelings, and to her heavenly disposition, affirming that she was possessed of all those essential qualities, which so peculiarly fitted her for the domestic relations of life. No unkind expression, no unfeeling act, no uncharitable deed ever pervaded her bosom, or escaped her lips. Peace to her ashes. In quiet peace reposes her once loved, now cherished form."

We give herewith a condensed account of the life of Mr. Warren D. Rowley.

During his boyhood, he is said to have evinced a decided taste for learning, and every advantage afforded by the schools of his village was eagerly improved. At the age of twenty, he went to Virginia, and engaged in teaching for a period of four years, following which he taught in Winsted, Conn., for two or three years. In 1827 he moved to Utica, N. Y., in the interest of the Riley Whiting Clock Co., of Winsted, Conn. From this point his business called him in various directions, and it appears the little village of So. Trenton, N. Y., offered some attractions for business, as in the spring of 1832 he purchased a village lot, on which he erected a dwelling house and store, and engaged in a general mercantile business, in which he continued during the remainder of his life. On Oct. 20, 1835, he married Nancy Davis Stanton, who died Feb. 17, 1837, leaving a little daughter, Nancy Stanton Rowly, then six days old. This daughter died Nov. 15, 1846. His second marriage was with Miss Harriet Maria Curry, daughter of Isaac and Sarah Curry, of So. Trenton, N. Y. In matters of a public character, and particularly in the education of the young, it is fair to say, he was conspicuous among his townsmen. In politics, he always acted with the whig party, and often prominently, as relating to town affairs. He was commissioner of schools for the town of Trenton during a period of several successive years, and justice of the peace for several years. He was also a most zealous advocate of the cause of temperance, and during the period of 1847-1850, when the temperance movement was so popular throughout the country, he was one of the most active in his little village. He died Sept. 5, 1854, after a long and painful illness.

The following tribute to his memory, is from the pen of Prof. James S. Gardner, Principal of Whitestown Academy, N. Y.

"I came to So. Trenton a total stranger. I soon learned to appreciate the acquaintance of several prominent men, among whom was Warren D. Rowly, Henry Rhodes, Isaac Curry, and many others. Mr. Rowly was leader among these men, not because he preferred to be, but because he was entitled to be. I used to think he took pride in setting a good plan on foot, and then bringing others into prominence. This was the secret of his skill in accomplishing more than he could have done single handed, for he was in poor health, and labored under great difficulties in consequence. I was frequently at his home, and I met him many times with his family. I think he must have left an impress upon his household, that thirty-three years—a generation of time—could not efface. I remember the effect of his impressive manner upon me, as we stood by the confined remains of a dear child of his, and questioned between ourselves the mysteries of the future, which has continued with me through my entire life."

The following notice of Mr. Rowly was published in the "Utica Tetotaler," soon after his death.

The recent death of Mr. Warren D. Rowly, of South Trenton, is an event adapted to spread gloom over a large community. He was born in Litchfield County, Conn., and at an early period in the history of this county, came to So. Trenton, where he has since continued to reside. Here, by his industry, he acquired a competency. It is hard to resign one so gentle and true. His was an educated mind, and for his many substantial accomplishments he was admired. He had a warm, open, generous, sincere, truthful heart, and for that he was respected, and beloved by all with whom he was brought in contact. His daily walk in life was exemplary and blameless, and his end, after a long and severe sickness, which he endured with a patience and fortitude truly beautiful, was that of the resigned and prayerful christian.

town, and largely interested as a contractor and builder. His son became interested in the business, and succeeded his father. He contracted and built for the general government ten, or more, light houses, a sea wall at Watch Hill, R. I., etc. He also erected the Old Stonington Bank building, the Stonington Marine Railway, the Salt Works, and faithfully fulfilled many other public contracts. He was largely interested in commerce when the whaling business flourished in Stonington. Subsequently, he became interested in Agriculture and manufacturing.

In early manhood he entered the militia, as a member of the 8th Company of the 30th Connecticut Regiment, and rose to its command, participating in the battle of Stonington, when he rendered brave and efficient service. Capt. Smith was one of the most intelligent and enterprising men of his day, commanding the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens, by whom he was chosen to represent the town of Stonington in the legislature of Connecticut, and filled almost every public position in his native town. As a master builder, he had no superior, and few if any equals. As a citizen, he was universally respected and beloved. As a christian, a generous supporter of the benevolent institutions of the church. In all the relations of life, as son, brother, husband, father and friend, he was kindly affectioned, and unselfishly devoted to their comfort and happiness." R. A. W.

He enlisted in the army in the late civil war, and as nothing has been heard of him since he enlisted, it is supposed he was killed in battle. They had one child.

183. i. Gertrude, b. in 1857. Married J. V. Ridgway, of Chicago.

THOMAS DAVIS (19) was married Dec. 25, 1780, to Mary Conklin, who was born at Amagansett, L. I., Aug. 30, 1756, and died in Preston, Conn., March 31, 1833. She was a descendant in a direct line, in the sixth generation, of Ananias Conklin, who came to this country from Nottinghamshire, England, in 1639. He resided in Salem, Mass., until 1649, when he came to Amagansett, town of E. Hampton, Suffolk Co., N. Y., where he died in 1657. The line of descent is as follows: 1st generation, Ananias; 2d generation, Benjamin, youngest son of Ananias, who married Hannah, daughter of John Mulford, one of the first settlers of E. Hampton; 3d generation, Ananias, son of Benjamin, born 1673, died 1740, married Hannah Ludlow; 4th generation, Henry, son of Ananias, baptized Feb. 22, 1702; 5th generation, Henry, son of Henry, baptized 1725, married Amy Hedges; 6th generation, Mary Conklin, who married Thomas Davis (19). Jeremiah Conklin, brother of Benjamin, and oldest son of Ananias the settler, married Mary Gardiner, oldest daughter of Lord Lion Gardiner, of Gardiner's Island, N. Y. He is the progenitor of the branch of the family to which Roscoe Conklin belongs. The Conklin's of E. Hampton were a numerous family. In 1775, there were twenty-five of the name in the small town of E. Hampton, capable of bearing arms. In the winter of 1780-1781, (after Thomas Davis was married,) Vice Admiral Arbuthnot, of the English Navy, with eleven ships of war, lay in Gardiner's Bay, so that no communication between the east end of Long Island and the main land could be had, except by "running the blockade." The officers and men under the command of the British Admiral, by his orders made frequent incursions and raids upon the eastern end of the Island, helping themselves to whatever might come in their way. And they sometimes extended their raids well up the Island. Mr. Davis did not take kindly to having the fruits of his labor thus disposed of, and being also anxious to return to his father's home in Stonington,

Conn., with his "bride of a month," procured a small sail boat, into which he put the wedding outfit, consisting of a large trunk well filled with the outfit of those days, (many articles of which are now in the families of her descendants,) and a seven pail brass kettle, (without which no well regulated family could keep house,) and taking advantage of a dark night, he set sail for the main land, and the next morning was at his father's house in Stonington, Conn., without so much as saying to the British Admiral, "by your kind permission sir." Mr. Davis remained at the Old Homestead, and worked for his father, at his trade, which was that of tanner and currier, and shoe making, (which business his father was engaged in, in connection with his farming business.) During the latter years of his residence in Stonington, he lived in a house which was located between the Homestead, and the Pawcatuck River. In the spring of 1802, in company with his brother Enos, he purchased of Jonathan Brewster, who was a great grandson of Elder William Brewster of Mayflower memory, a farm situated on the left bank of the Thames River, in New London Co., Conn., about two miles below Chelsea Landing, now Norwich City, which they divided, Thomas taking the north, and Enos the south part. Here he lived carrying on in connection with his farming business, the manufacture of leather and shoe making until his death, Sunday, Jan. 23, 1831, in the 80th year of his age. The children of Thomas Davis and wife Mary Conklin were :

183. i. Thomas, b. in Stonington, Conn., Sept. 31, 1781, d. in Preston, Conn., Feb. 4, 1848.

Her father, Peleg Shaw, died at sea July 20, 1799, while on a voyage for his health, which had become impaired by too close application to business. His body was buried in the ocean. His wife Lucretia Billings, was born March 20, 1768, and died at South New Berlin, N. Y., in 1848. After the death of her husband she married Ezekiel Crandall, by whom she had two children, Betsey and Thomas. Their children were :

189. i. Julia, b. Feb. 8, 1814, in Preston, Conn.
190. ii. Lucy, b. Apr. 4, 1816, in Preston, Conn., d. Feb. 16, 1817.

The following tribute to the memory of Mrs. Lizzie Tallman (Davis) Depew, is from Mr. John L. Denison, of Hartford, Conn., for many years her Sunday School teacher :

Early in life she evinced a force of character and an aptness to learn, that made the transition from childhood to maturity imperceptible—the girl was lost in the woman. How early she became the subject of Divine Grace, and the influences of the Holy Spirit is not known, but that she gave herself up to know the mind and do the will of God, every step in her progress gave unmistakable evidence.

In the day school her presence was always like sunshine, and her knowledge was acquired with the one idea to make the most of a practical life. Her advent into the Central Baptist Sabbath School and the Church was like the unfolding of a flower. Endowed with an unusual talent for music, both instrumental and vocal, she found her soul's delight, and never failed to re-produce in the public service what so enlivened her soul. No matter where, in school, in church, in society, or in the sacred shade of home, she preserved the same even and sweet tempered disposition that surrounded her with loving friends, and finally culminated in the affections of her husband, Edward D. Depew, of New York, where she went to reside amid all that could make life desirable, and satisfy a tender spirit such as she possessed.

As the ripest fruit and the rarest flowers are often first gathered for the Master's use, so it pleased Heaven to take her after two and one-half years of happy married life, leaving her husband and two boys to mourn an irreparable loss. Though thus suddenly called to part with them and other friends, she was ready for the summons, and in this her greatest trial could sweetly say, "He doeth all things well."

To her the gospel of Christ presented the grandest ideals of life, and her acceptance of Him inspired her with conviction, courage and self sacrifice to bring those ideals into practical results, so that in all the relations of daughter, sister, wife and mother, she proved herself to be the very embodiment of "whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, and whatsoever things are of good report."

It is true her life was short as we mark time, but measured by the work she accomplished, the influences she exerted, and the hopes she fostered, it stretches beyond computation. She lived in the circles wherever she moved, and will live as long as the treasures of love, and the endearment of christian friendship unite to make the association of earth the stepping stones to the paradise of God.

Charles L. Davis died at Toms

River, May 10, 1878. The following obituary notice of the late Charles L. Davis, was published in a local paper soon after his death.

"By the death of Mr. Davis, Ocean County loses an estimable and valued citizen; one in whom energy and ability were equally manifest, and one in whom enterprise and progress were matters of creed earnestly and vigorously sustained almost to the hour of his decease. Mr. Davis, was in his boyhood a diligent student, and at an early age was an accomplished scholar; and although of slender frame and slight constitution, which compelled him twice to abandon indoor professions, he was always a persistent reader, never permitting his classics to rust, abreast of the times in all every-day affairs, and unusually familiar, for one who gave such close attention to business matters, with the best literature of the day.

Mr. Davis first chose the profession of a teacher. His health warned him to lay teaching aside. He came to Ocean county and engaged in cranberry culture, and in this occupation he remained to the close of his life. But in the interim, in 1863, he, in connection with E. K. Drake, engaged in publishing the Ocean Emblem. Mr. Davis was exceedingly fond of Journalism. He was ready of wit, keen of satire, and a fluent, easy writer, as the Emblem fully attested. His tilts with neighboring contemporaries clearly evinced his ability to tersely and vigorously present his views while discovering and attacking the weak points of his disputants; while his discussion of the topics of the times always displayed versatility and force. His connection with the Emblem was brief, and he soon relinquished it, and returned more earnestly than ever to out-door pursuits.

Mr. Davis was essentially a progressive man, and Toms River and vicinity will long remember him as an earnest worker for the good of the community at large and especially the attractiveness of his chosen home.

Mr. Davis was fearless of consequences when ever a wrong was to be redressed. He was a gentleman of pleasing address, and his companionship was to us, on many occasions, a source of pleasure and profit. He was for more than twenty years a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and died in the full belief of and confidence in his chosen faith. He was for several years the acceptable Superintendent of the Presbyterian Sabbath School at Toms River.

Born in Preston, Conn., he removed to Tarrytown, N. Y., where he was the successful Principal of a high school. Subsequently he traveled a few months for his health, and finally settled at Toms River, where, as he once said, the happiest hours of his life were passed, and where the blissful moment found him at the last "by faith prepared for Grace!"

The following tribute to his memory is from the pen of his old Pastor and friend, Rev. J. H. Frazee:

AMONG THE HILLS, May, 1878.

The recent death of Mr. Charles L. Davis—which occurred at Toms River, May 10th—has awakened many tender personal recollections.

In 1861, we met for the first time. During years of intimate relations, his character proved a study of interesting development. He was one of the most enthusiastic and generous workers, whether in church or social relations. The old days of Sunday School work are recalled but to suggest the ardor and courage shown by him during years of active superintendence. Among a noble little band, who gave time, means and love to our little church, in its days of struggling infancy, he acted as Ruling Elder with fidelity and hopefulness. His voice led the congregation for years with such acceptance, that to have heard it later now and then in his days of failing vigor, was to have hopes aroused hardly cherished at other hours, and to recall the pleasant past with delightful reminders. In business enterprise, our friend had no superior, even among men who were engaging in hardy and promising occupation with rare zeal. He forgot self, sacrificed needed hours of rest, threw his strength with will of sternest energy upon an issue, disappointment in which in no way reflected upon the sturdy and hearty courage of the initial efforts. His struggle with disease was one of wonderful persistence. What would have discouraged and driven many into hopeless retreat, seemed only to be accepted by our brother as a challenge to renewed conflict, most readily and often resumed at fearful odds.

Earth, with its absorbing demands, did not alone engage him. 'He looked for a city' not made with hands, though he loved his own beautiful home, and clung to the dear ones God gave him with truest devotion. With much to live for, and keen appreciation of the bright and beautiful and good of this world, he turned from all to that Savior whom he long ago professed to love, when the summons came, 'Come up higher,' with quiet trust and restful confidence.

A life chequered by many clouds that obstructed the sunlight at times—a life upon which many disappointments not easy to bear fell heavily, and which bore witness to many a brave battle and many a signal victory too—has ended. but the sunny memories survive. We bow to the shock of loss ; the sadness of sore bereavement stills the harp-string now ; but there shall yet come the song of victory, and the restful reflection follows the sigh-burdened experience of these days of sorrow.

In Greenwood, amid the sleeping thousands, on a day of such brightness and freshness of nature, that glad things of the Resurrection were lovingly foreshadowed, we deposited the new proof of life's uncertain ways, but certain end, 'Earth to earth—ashes to ashes—dust to dust.' The cross and wreath of purest flowers were laid upon his finished grave, and we said, as tears were falling fresh, 'Well done.' These words were more lovingly uttered as He who knew better than all others the long record of struggle and victory, of prayer and gracious answer, welcomed His weary servant unto Himself!

And so, as our brother often sung in the long ago days, the appreciative heart of the writer sings now:

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy long employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

"Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ,
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

Charles LeMont Davis (193) and Sophia Dewey Horton his wife had one child.

226. i. Nellie Sophia, b. in Norwich, Conn., Dec. 28, 1850.

NELLIE SOPHIA DAVIS (226) was married at Toms River, N. J., May 16, 1871, to Albert Roberts, of New York City. He was the youngest son of Ephraim Roberts, Jr., and wife Mary (Ward) Roberts, and was born in Amherst, Mass., March 22, 1840. His youth was for the most part spent in his native town, until he was seventeen years of age. The year following he completed at Middleboro Academy, Mass., the preparatory course for admission to college, and at the age of nineteen, was admitted to Amherst College. After remaining in college one year, he was engaged for several successive terms, as a teacher in the public schools in Newport, R. I., still continuing his studies in Latin and Greek, under the tuition of Rev. Dr. Dumont, (now deceased) of that city, between whom and himself sprang up a warm and lasting friendship. As the time approached for returning to college his purpose changed, and deciding to commence at once the study of law—his chosen profession—he entered the office of Messrs. Matthews & Swan, attorneys at law, of New York City, remaining there until the call was made for nine months men for the war. He responded to the call, and went to his native town, Amherst, Mass., and enlisted in Co. G, of the 52d Regiment of Mass., Volunteers. The Regiment was sent South, and was with Gen. Banks in his unfortunate and disastrous Red River expedition. In the latter part of May following, he fell a prey to severe and protracted illness, and was still in hospital when the Regiment was discharged. After his discharge from the Army, he spent some time in recuperation, when he returned to the office of Matthews & Swan, where he remained for a while, and then entered the office of the celebrated law firm of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, of New York City, where he completed his studies, and soon after commenced the practice of his own profession on his own account. Gen. Stewart L. Woodford of the above firm in speaking of him said: "Mr. Roberts entered our office in the autumn of 1866. He remained with us until he left to commence practice on his own account. He was quiet, industrious, methodical, energetic, zealous and faithful. He did well all that he undertook, and had our confidence and respect. After he left to begin practice on his own account, I saw him but seldom, but our friendship continued, and when we met, our intercourse was kind and cordial. Marked peculiarities of my old friend and student, were his quiet, correct, undemonstrative way of doing well whatever he had to do, and he was always seeking to do something. I can say truthfully that Mr. Roberts had my highest respect and sincere regard."

We are permitted to copy the following from a letter written by a friend soon after Mr. Roberts' death:

"It was with peculiar sorrow that I learned on my return to town, that your husband, my friend, had been taken away. From my long acquaintance with him, I had learned to admire him for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart, which only those who were so favored as to know him well, could duly appreciate. How genial he was as a companion, how courteous in his demeanor, how loyal to his clients, how devoted to his profession, how fond of his home and his family, how honorable and conscientious in all the walks of life."

"From childhood, his sympathetic, genial, and social nature, with a ready wit in repartee, attached to him many warm and valued friends. He was a dutiful son, a kind and affectionate brother, husband and father."

He died in Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 27, 1885. The children of Albert Roberts and wife, Nellie Sophia Davis, were :

office of the late Dr. Thomas P. Wattles, of North Stonington, Conn., under whose tuition he remained for a time. He attended medical lectures at Castleton, Vermont, and at the University of New York. After receiving his diploma, he commenced the practice of his profession in Poquetannock, Conn., and adjoining country. After a few years he became convinced that it was his duty to enter the Ministry, and commenced a course of study with that end in view, until the fall of 1857, when he abandoned his medical practice, and was ordained Deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church, Oct. 29, 1857. In Nov. following, he took charge of Christ Church, Pomfret, Conn. LOUISE WHITFIELD (258) was married April 22, 1887, to Andrew Carnegie, of Pittsburg, Pa.

The following condensed sketch of Mr. Whitfield's life was published soon after his death:

"We can scarcely do justice to our subject within the narrow limits of a mere sketch. His career was filled with incidents which should be told to make a biography complete. We have not the space nor data to accomplish our desire, and we must be content with a brief recital—an outline—a resumé.

To those especially who had the good fortune to know Mr. John W. Whitfield intimately, he was a genial, whole-souled, companionable gentleman. He was one of the most upright of men; honorable, conscientiously honest. Highly respected by those under him, Mr. Whitfield possessed rare executive ability. He took a deep interest in institutions of a benevolent character, and found time, notwithstanding that he was a member of several mercantile boards, to give considerable attention to them. The New York Ophthalmic hospital, for instance, owes to Mr. Whitfield much of its present success. It was through his exertions that this institution became what it is, and the Board of Managers were not slow in recognizing the services rendered by Mr. Whitfield. After his death they presented his family with a set of resolutions on parchment as a partial return for the assistance he had given. Mr. Whitfield was a member of the late Dr. Chapin's church and took a deep working interest in the Chapin Home. To many who were only slightly acquainted, or had mere business dealings with him, he was reserved in manner, yet gifted, in a commercial sense, to an extraordinary degree, friendly enough, but possessed of a certain ability (the outgrowth probably of a nervous temperament) to ward off intimacy. In 1848, when about fifteen years old, he entered the employ of Lyman Cooke & Co., in the notion business. The firm was at that time located at 60 Broadway, and did a business of about $250,000 a year. From the position of boy he rose by degrees until, in 1858, his merit and worth were acknowledged and rewarded, and he was admitted to partnership, and the firm became Dowd, Baker Whitfield & Co. In 1870 Dowd & Baker retired from active interest, remaining as specials, and the firm became Whitfield, Powers & Co. Mr. Powers died in 1876. Mr. Whitfield died in 1878, leaving a widow and three children, and Mr. Vail died in 1881. After Mr. Whitfield's death Mr. Jarvis retired, and a new firm was formed, which has continued ever since under the same style, with the interests of deceased partners' families remaining. The business of the firm increased very largely under the extraordinary ability of Mr. Whitfield, and to-day they rank as a leading house.

CLARISSA DAVIS (188) was married in Preston, Conn., April 3, 1828, to Henry Haskell, son of John, and Lucinda (Hubbard) Haskell. He was born in Preston, Conn., Nov. 17, 1799, and died

Nov. 17, 1859, in the 61st year of his age. He died in the house where he was born, and had lived all his life time, honored, respected, trusted and beloved. He had held many offices of honor and trust. Mr. Haskell was a farmer. They had no children.

The following obituary notice was published soon after his death:

"Henry Haskell, town clerk of Preston, died in that town on Thursday, November 17, 1859. He had held his office as town clerk uninterruptedly for the last twenty-five years, and died as he had lived, deeply respected by all who knew him. He was an honest and true man, and we shall always remember our intercourse with him with unqualified pleasure."

The Hon. John W. Stedman, of Hartford, Conn., an old friend of Mr. Haskell, pays the following tribute to his worth and memory:

"Mr. Haskell was one of the earliest acquaintances that I made when I went to Norwich in 1844. He remained, up to the time of his death, one of the truest friends I ever had. He was a man of unquestioned integrity, frank and open in all his dealings, kind hearted as a child, and of sound judgement. No man was oftener appealed to for advice by his neighbors, and especially was this the case in matters of variance or dispute. He loved peace, and all things that make for peace. He was a just and honest man. Preston never had a better citizen and neighbor, and no man towards whom he was drawn ever had a truer friend."

A tribute to the memory of Mrs. Henry Haskell, who died Mar. 29, 1883, from a friend.

"Mrs. Haskell was a person of remarkable depth of character. Though living for many years in a sparsely settled neighborhood, going away from home very infrequently, and then but a few miles to visit her nearest relatives, she had still an acquaintance and friendship of very wide extent. Cheerfulness and kindliness characterized her manner, and her conversation displayed a large diversity of knowledge and thought. She had the faculty possessed by a few only, of adapting herself readily to different persons and characters. Her thoughts and feelings were found to have much in common with old and young, rich and poor, the educated and the ignorant. Her home was a model of neatness. "The heart of her husband did safely trust in her." She was a true help-meet in the conduct and management of domestic affairs, and the interest which she always manifested in all public affairs, she kept up to the last. The dry records of the town of Preston, kept by her husband for many years, were made interesting by her clear and chaste penmanship. Having no children of her own, she adopted in a measure those of others, especially her numerous nephews and nieces. The death of her husband was like the separation of a tree from the ivy, which has long clung to it, at once imparting ornament, and receiving support. And her own death, after years of loneliness, not only to the circle of her relatives, but to the community where those years of loneliness had been spent, was the severance of a most intimate and loving tie.

ENOS DAVIS (21) was married 1792, to Phebe Mulford, daughter of Ezekiel Mulford, of E. Hampton, L. I. She died in Preston, Conn., Oct. 13, 1822, in the 53d year of her age. She was descended on the paternal side, in a direct line, in the fifth generation, from William Mulford, who came to this country with his two brothers, one of whom settled in Virginia. The other brothers, Thomas and William, came to E. Hampton, where they settled. The line of descent from William the ancestor, to Phebe, who married Enos Davis, is as follows: 1st generation, William Mulford, who married Sarah ———; 2d generation, Thomas Mulford, whose wife was Mary Conklin, daughter of Jeremiah, oldest son of Ananias Conklin. The wife of Jeremiah Conklin, was Mary Gardiner, only daughter of Lord Lion Gardiner, of Gardiner's Island; 3d generation, Jeremiah Mulford; 4th generation, Ezekiel Mulford, father of Phebe. Ezekiel Mulford was Captain of the 12th Co., of Col. Smith's famous Suffolk Co., Regiment, in the Revolutionary war, and received directly from Gen. Washington the highest compliment for leading a dangerous ambuscade. He is said to have been a man of great resolution and determination, and well educated for the times. He lived to the advanced age of 94 years. Enos Davis was married 2d to Mrs. Lois (Palmer) Perkins, of Groton, Conn. No children. She died in Sept. 1864. Mr. Davis resided at the time of his death, upon the farm that his father Enos Davis had owned and occupied, which was a part of the purchase that he and his brother Thomas made of Johathan Brewster in 1802, and which has been heretofore described in these pages. He had resided there continuously for eighty-three years. He was a man of true sterling worth and integrity, a good citizen, a kind and obliging neighbor. He had the respect and confidence of the community, where he had resided for so many years. He was truthful, true and honest in his dealings with men.

Prof. John P. Gulliver, of Andover, Mass., who had been his Pastor in former years, in speaking of him recently said:

"I remember Mr. Davis as a modest, sensible, worthy man, who always commanded my unqualified respect. I very much enjoyed the visits which Mrs. Gulliver and myself often made at his home, at his earnest invitation, and which I remember were protracted much beyond the usual limit of Pastoral calls, including usually a bountiful repast, served in the hearty, old fashioned New England style. My talk with Mr. Davis was often upon agriculture, and of the history of the locality he occupied, and of the relation it bore to Elder Brewster and the early Plymouth Colonists. From a somewhat extended acquaintance with Mr. Davis, I deemed him a faultless man."

The children of Jeremiah Davis, and wife Harriet Sydleman, were:

(See marriage of Maria Davis (27), for ancestry of Nathaniel Stanton.) He was born at Stonington, Conn., April 22, 1778, and died at the Island of Trinidad, of yellow fever, March 15, 1807. Catherine Pendleton Stanton, the wife of Nathaniel Stanton, died in Stonington, Conn. Their children were:

297. i. Amos Pendleton, b. in Stonington, Conn., Dec. 27, 1802, d. in Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 8, 1874.

AMOS PENDLETON STANTON (297) was married in Troy, N. Y., Aug. 6, 1829, to Olivia White. She was a graduate of Miss Willard's Seminary, Troy, N. Y. She was a daughter of John White, Jr., whose father, John White, came to this country from England, and settled in the state of New York. On the maternal side she is a descendant, in a direct line, in the eighth generation, of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth Colony. The line of descent is as follows: 1st generation, Gov. William Bradford; 2d generation, William Bradford, Jr.; 3d generation, Joseph Bradford; 4th generation, Joseph Bradford, Jr.; 5th generation, Eleanor Bradford, who married David Hyde; 6th generation, Elizabeth Hyde, daughter of David, who married Ira Hinkley; 7th generation, Philena Hinkley, daughter of Ira, who married John White, Jr.; 8th generation, Olivia White, daughter of John White, Jr. The children of Amos Pendleton Stanton and wife Olivia White were:

300. i. Julia A. b. in Georgia, Vt., Jan. 17, 1832, d. in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 17, 1856.

301. ii. Eliza J. b. in Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 23, 1837.

302. iii. Emma P. b. in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 8, 1847.

ELIZA J. STANTON (301) was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 8, 1858, to Dr. James M. Allen, son of James Morrill and Mary Dorby (Robins) Allen, and grandson of Rev. Wilkes Allen, for many years a Unitarian minister at Chalmersford, Mass. The Morrills are of Huguenot descent. Dr James M. Allen's English ancestor was Walter Allen, who came to this country from England in 1635, and settled at Newbury, Mass., where he was a freeholder. He afterwards removed to Watertown, Mass., and died in Charlestown, Mass., in 1681. (See Bond's history of Watertown.) His maternal grandparents were Jonathan Dorby Robins, who married Frances Crafts. Frances Crafts was a niece of Christopher Gore, who was Governor of Mass. in 1809. Their children are:

- 303. i. Stanton, b. in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 29, 1859.
- 304. ii. Julia F. b. in Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 5, 1862.
- 305. iii. Emily R. b. in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 17, 1866,

- 307. v. Robins, b. in Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 8, 1870, d. in Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 16, 1873.

STANTON ALLEN (303) is a Physician and Surgeon in New York City, where he also has charge of a Hospital. For a man of his age, he is eminent in his profession.

We here insert a sketch of the life of Amos P. Stanton (297).

Half orphaned at a tender age by the death of his father, he struck out manfully to fight the battle of life. At the age of twelve years, he went to live with his great Uncle, Thomas Davis, in Preston, Conn., with whom he lived until Rev. Henry Davis assumed the Presidency of Middlebury College, Vt., when he went to reside with him, and under his tuition and instruction was prepared to enter college. He entered Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., while his uncle, Rev. Henry Davis, was President of the institution, but left before graduation, and went to Troy, N. Y., where he entered the employ of the celebrated Quaker merchant, Jacob Miller, where he remained for a while, when he formed a partnership with a Mr. Lowry in the grocery business, and in 1828, the firm of Lowry, Norton & Stanton was formed, which continued until 1831, when he bought the interest of his partners in the business, and formed a partnership with George H. Tracy. This partnership continued until 1833, when he sold his interest in the business to Tracy, and went to New York and commenced business at 40 Water Street, taking as a partner, Henry Starkweather. After the great fire in New York, Dec. 16, 1835, he removed to 60 Pearl Street. After a time the partnership of Stanton and Starkweather was dissolved, and he formed a partnership with his cousin, Charles H. Stanton, which continued until 1844, when he sold his interest in the business to his partner, and gave up the mercantile business. Soon after he became largely interested in real estate in Brooklyn. Soon after the Brooklyn city R. R. Co., was organized, he was elected President of the Co., and by his efficient management, it soon became a paying institution. He resigned the Presidency in 1858, and in 1859 purchased a large tract of land at Toms River, N. J., and removed there with his family in 1861, where he resided until 1873, when he sold his property and returned to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he died Dec. 10, 1874. In politics Mr. Stanton was a Democrat until after the Mexican war, when with other Democrats he became a free soil man. When the Republican party was formed he became active in the party, and was a delegate to the National Convention that nominated John C. Fremont for President. When the war of the Rebellion commenced, he favored a vigorous prosecution of the war, and often expressed his disapprobation of the (to him) dilatory manner in which it was conducted by the government. He was a man of strong convictions, and invincible in what he believed to be right. Scrupulously honest and exact in his dealings with men, he expected and exacted the same from others.

MARIA SALINA STANTON (298) was married in Stonington, Conn., March 9, 1829, to Origen Perkins who was born in Mansfield, Conn., Feb. 21, 1801. Marriage ceremony performed by Rev. Jabez S. Swan. He was the oldest son of Ephraim and Lucy (Merrick) Perkins, and was a descendant in a direct line in the seventh generation, of John Perkins, born in Newent, Gloucester Co., England, in 1590. Late in the season of 1630, with his wife and his six children, John, Thomas, Elizabeth, Anna, Lydia and Jacob, he sailed for America in the famous ship Lyon, Capt. Pierce, and landed in Boston in Feb. 1631. Roger Williams came in the same ship with them. The line of descent from John Perkins the ancestor to Origen, who married Maria Salina Perkins, is as follows: 1st generation John Perkins, the ancestor, whose wife was Judith; 2d generation, John Perkins, Jr., who married Elizabeth; 3d generation, Joseph Perkins, who married Martha Morgan; 4th generation, Matthew Perkins, who married Hannah Bishop; 5th generation, Ephraim Perkins, who married Mary Chaplin; 6th generation, Ephraim Perkins, Jr., who married Lucy Merrick; 7th generation, Origen Perkins, who married Maria S. Stanton. There is a tradition that the father of John Perkins, the ancestor, was Jacob Perkins, a knight and president of a college in Newent, Gloucester Co., England, born in 1560, but we find no proof to sustain the tradition.

When Origen Perkins was fifteen years of age, he attended school at an academy at Canandaigua, N. Y. In 1819 he taught school at Rising Sun, Indiana, a year later he went down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. After a residence of three years in the Southern States and Texas, he went to the West Indies, and thence to New York. In 1828 he returned to Trenton, N. Y., and in 1829 went to Stonington, Conn., where he married. After his marriage, he resided in Trenton until 1835, when he removed to Chicago, Ill. In August 1836 he went to Burlington, Wis., and made a claim, upon which he built a log house, the first dwelling house built in the town, and in 1837 went there with his family to reside. In 1850 he went overland to California. On March 8, 1853, on the eve of his departure for home, he was shot and killed by an Indian for the purpose of robbery, he having a large amount of gold dust secreted on his person. Mr. Perkins was an unusually fine intellectual looking man. He had a versatile mind, highly cultivated, and appreciated beauty in nature, art and literature.

Maria Salina Stanton, with her cousin, Abby Davis Palmer, and Miss Nancy Babcock, established the first Sunday school in the eastern part of the town of Stonington, in a school house that was located on the "Davis Homestead."

The family Bible that belonged to the English ancestor of Origen Perkins is now, and always has been, in the possession of his descendants. It is known as the Geneva or Breeches Bible. It was imprinted at London by the deputies of Christopher Barke, printer to the Queen's (Elizabeth) most excellent Majestie, in 1599. It has a number of quaint engravings of the temple, and at the end is the book of Psalms, collected into English meter by Thomas Sternhold, John Hopkins and others. In 1708 it was owned by Elisha Perkins, a great grandson of the ancestor, who thus wrote in it:

Elisha Perkins, his great Bible book,
God give him grace therein to look,
And when the bell for him doth toll,
The Lord have mercy on his soul.

The Bible is now in the possession of Horatio N. Perkins, Esq., of Melrose Highlands, Mass.

The children of Origen Perkins and wife Maria Salina Stanton, were:

- 308. i. Mary, b. in So. Trenton, N. Y., April 21, 1831, d. in Burlington, Wis., Aug. 18, 1845.

FREDERICK S. PERKINS (309) was married May 30, 1864, to Emily Wainright, daughter of Edward and Hannah (Edson) Wainright, of Minneapolis, Minn. She was born at St. Albans, Vt., March 5, 1837, and died at Burlington, Wis., May 18, 1877. Their children were:

Frederick S. Perkins, early in life, showed a decided taste for painting and the fine arts. In Feb. 1853, he entered the studio of the distinguished landscape painter, Jasper F. Cropsey, of New York city, where under his teaching and instruction he studied the art of painting. After completing his studies, he spent some time traveling, gathering relics of antiquity. He is a great antiquarian, and has one of the largest, if not the largest collection, of pre-historic objects in the country. As an artist Mr. Perkins has few equals and fewer superiors. Soon after his marriage he came to Burlington, Wis., his old home, and took up his residence where he now resides.

NATHANIEL STANTON (299) was married July 10, 1851, to Mary Hall Sutton, daughter of George L. and Mary (Hall) Sutton. She was born at East Providence, R. I., June 13, 1833. They had one child:

The children by this 2d marriage were:

MARY DAVIS (320) was never married. She lived for more than forty years in the family of her brother Henry, to whom she was devotedly attached.

○ SAMUEL DAVIS (321) was married at Ballston, N. Y., October 3,

1789, to Mrs. Mary (Kirby) Dunham, who was born at Middletown, Conn., May 2, 1763, died at Ballston, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1855, in the 93d year of her age. She was married 1st to Solomon Dunham, of Berlin, Conn., May 4, 1786. They had one child, Mary Dunham, born in Middletown, Conn., Feb. 23, 1787, six months after the death of her father, who died at Point a Pitre, Gaudaloupe, Aug. 23, 1786. She grew up in the family of her step-father, and was married March 18, 1804, to the Rev. John McRea, and died Aug. 18, 1829, in Dover, Ohio. Mary (Kirby) (Dunham) Davis was a descendant in a direct line, in the fifth generation, of John Kirby, who came to this country from Warwickshire, England, previous to 1753, and settled in Middletown, Conn. The line of descent is as follows: 1st generation, John Kirby whose wife was Elizabeth; 2d generation, Joseph Kirby whose wife was Sarah; 3d generation John Kirby who married Hannah Stow, March 17, 1718; 4th generation, John Kirby, Jr., who married Lucia Norton, Dec. 31, 1747. She died 1758, and he married Ruth Coleman, widow of Amos Coleman, Jan. 28, 1761. They were the parents of Mary (Kirby) Dunham, who married Samuel Davis (321). The children of Samuel Davis, and wife Mary, were:

- 325. i. John Kirby, b. in Ballston, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1792, d. in Troy, N. Y., Dec. 5, 1867.
- 326. ii. Samuel S. b. in Ballston, N. Y., July 12, 1793, d. in Summer-ville, Ga., June 21, 1877.
- 327. iii. Abigail Maria, b. in Ballston, N. Y., Nov. 3, 1795, d. at Charlestown, W. Va., Jan. 18, 1875.
- 328. iv. Henry, born in Ballston, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1798.
- 329. v. Melissa, b. in Ballston, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1804, d. June 26, 1805.

At the early age of seventeen years, Samuel Davis (321) entered Clinton Academy, E. Hampton, L. I., under the tuition of Rev. Mr. Devotion, where he remained three years. At the expiration of that time, he commenced the study of medicine and surgery with Dr. Philip Turner, of Norwich, Conn., one of the most skillful physicians and surgeons of his day. After completing his medical course, which he did with great honor to himself, he went to Schoharie, N. Y., where he practiced his profession for two years, with great acceptance, when Judge Beriah Palmer and Seth C. Baldwin, Esq., two influential citizens of Ballston, Saratoga Co., N. Y., having heard from highly respected citizens of Albany, who had become acquainted with him, of his skill and success as a physician, for so young a man, (he being then scarcely twenty-five years of age,) induced him to leave Schoharie, and settle in Ballston, where he continued in the practice of his profession for nearly half a century.

He won not only an enviable confidence in his skill in the profession, but the respect, confidence, and esteem of the people of the county, as a man of high moral character, and a christian gentleman. In personal appearance, he was tall, slender, and very erect, a clean cut, refined, and scholarly face, dark brown hair and blue eyes, full of kindness and laughter. He had the rare tact and intuitive insight of character and temperament which make the wise and successful physician, with a very keen sense of humor, able both to give and take a joke. Apropos of his knowledge of character, one of his patients, an intimate friend of aristocratic birth, great pride and hypochondriacally inclined, was continually sending for him, to disclose to him the awful secret that she had but a short time to live, and wishing him as her husband's most intimate friend, to advise him not to marry again. At one of these interviews, he concluded to change his tactics. So very seriously and sympathetically he replied. "Mrs.——— I have thought very seriously on this subject—knowing your frail health—and I have concluded that I cannot consistently, with my regard for your husband, advise him not to marry again. On the contrary, I shall advise him as soon as practicable to seek another companion, for he would not only be very lonely, but with his young family he would be weighed down with care. So in thinking over the subject, I have fixed upon one I should advise him to marry." "And who pray, if I may ask, have you been so kind as to choose in my place." "Oh, certainly" said he, "it is Aunt Polly!" (a woman who did weaving in their family). "Aunt Polly!" said she, with an hysterical shriek, "would you have the Judge so disgrace his family as to bring that woman here?" "Why, I can see no disgrace about it, she is a respectable woman, and it would be a practical thing to do. She is a good manager and would look out for things, makes a good deal of cloth, which is needed in your family." "Well, Doctor," she replied, "you need not think any more on this subject, I do not intend to leave the situation open." It is needless to say that that ended the interviews on that subject, and it was a standing joke between himself and his friends ever after.

He was proverbially kind to the poor, never taking compensation from them for his services. But he did not relish being told in a very patronising manner by a wealthy, but very penurious man, that he ought not to charge that poor man anything, (speaking of a poor patient whom he had attended through a very long and dangerous illness). "How then can I live?" inquired the Dr. "By getting it out of the rich," was the reply. Shortly after that he had an opportunity of making a practical application of this gentleman's good advice. He was obliged to call upon the Dr. to set a broken bone for him, when convalescent, he called upon the Dr. saying, he supposed he had a small charge against him for patching him up. "Yes, a mere trifle," replied the Dr. and consulting his books, answered, to the man's utter consternation, "twenty-five dollars." When it was indignantly demanded why he should make such a charge, he replied very quietly, "you know when I attended Mr. —you said I ought not to charge him anything, and when I very naturally asked how I was to live, you replied 'by getting it out of the rich.' I thought it good advice, and have acted upon it." There are many now living in Saratoga County in whose families Dr. Davis practiced, who can bear testimony to his uniform goodness of heart, his christian graces, and his kindness and gentleness of manner in the sick chamber.

We copy the following from an obituary notice of Mrs. Samuel Davis which was published soon after her death.

The decease of this estimable woman is an event which claims something more than a simple record. Her mother was converted under the preaching of Whitfield. She lived to the great age of nearly one hundred years, and for more than eighty years was a member of the visible church. In faith and devotion Mrs. Davis closely followed her excellent parent, and like her, was spared to a good old age. Such were her intellectual and moral habits, her social qualities and affections, and the tenor of her life that her departure brings to surviving friends a profound conviction of bereavement. In her youth she was fully instructed in the doctrines and duties of the christian religion, and early became a subject of heavenly grace. For more than sixty years she was connected with the Presbyterian Church at Ballston Centre. Possessing a mind of unusual vigor, and being also favored with early religious training, her views of truth and duty were clear. She lived to see two of her sons and one of her grandsons in the ministry, while two of her daughters became the wives of clergymen. She was ever reminded of the injunction to "keep holy the Sabbath day." On that day she uniformly devoted all the time she could command, after performing other duties, equally binding, to the religious instruction of her household. Her children cannot forget her affectionate counsels, given at such times, and in every day life to her pure moulding and guiding influences, they will ever acknowledge themselves greatly indebted.

11 JOHN KIRBY DAVIS (325) was married Oct. 17, 1815, to Mary Elizabeth Deming, daughter of Jonathan Deming, of Castleton, Vt. She died at Troy, N. Y., Jan. 8, 1884, in the 90th year of her age. John Kirby Davis studied at Middlebury College, Vt., and entered the ministry in 1820. From 1821 to 1834 he preached in Caldwell, (Lake George) Warrensburg, Fondasburg and Kingsboro, N. Y. From 1834 to 1844 he resided in Schenectady, N. Y., and for most of that time he was agent for the American Bible Society and the American Seamen's Friend Society. In 1844 he removed to Troy, N. Y. and was for many years a chaplain among the boatmen at that place.

Obituary notice of Rev. John Kirby Davis :

Died, in this city, Rev. John Kirby Davis, aged seventy-six years. The subject of this notice was for more than half a century, a devoted christian, working faithfully in the Lord's vineyard. He spent many years as a missionary among our seamen and the boatmen on the river and canals, always endeavoring to do the work assigned him by his Savior by counsel and advice, and in the distribution of religious books and tracts calculated to arrest their attention, and to bring their minds under a moral and religious influence. In a word, his highest motive was to glorify God in the salvation of the souls of his fellow men. To this work he devoted all his energies.

The following tribute to the memory of Mrs. John Kirby Davis is from her old Pastor Dr. F. G. Clarke :

Mrs. Davis the wife of Rev. John Kirby Davis was an aged disciple of rare qualities of mind and heart, she knew all the lessons of faith and patience which must be learned in the minister's home.

In widowhood she lived on to the age of nearly ninety years, ripening all the time in the various fruitage of the spirit. She held the Bible close to her heart and conscience. No philosophy, no questioning could move her from the foundation on which she had built her hopes. The Bible was to her the verity of verities. It was a joy to visit her sick room. Her repose of faith was helpful. No one could sit with her for half an hour and not go away stronger, calmer, more patient. At length she came near the haven; flesh and heart were failing; pain and weariness were her lot, but none of these things moved her. She knew her anchorage. The light was all about her. As she went in through the gates into the city, the paths were lighted, celestial lamps shone on every side. She was calm, assured, peaceful without rapture, but solid trust and tranquil outlook, she passed along. The old faith of our fathers was grandly tested in the last days of this aged saint. No one could go in and out of that christian home and not feel the power of that piety which grows out of humble trust. To have known Mrs. Davis is to have a buttress built up against the wall of our christian faith.

The wife of Col Clay was Ann, a daughter of Elias and Parnell Lagardere, Huguenots. The descendants of Col. Joseph Clay are remarkable for their talents and distinction. They present one of the few illustrations of the transmission of talent. His son, Joseph Clay, Jr., was a lawyer and a judge of eminence. At the close of one of his most effective appeals in behalf of a criminal, the presiding judge in tears, said to the sobbing jury, "beware of the eloquence of that man."

The children of Samuel S. Davis and wife Mary Cuthbert Cumming are:

JULIA CUTHBERT DAVIS (352) was born on the Sand Hills near Augusta, Ga., baptized by Rev S. K. Talmage. She was married Dec. 3, 1864, to Paul H. Langdon, of Wilmington, N. C.

866. iv. Mary Cumming, b. March 5, 1873, baptized July 13, 1873.

All the children of Paul H. and Julia C. Langdon were baptized by their maternal grandfather, Rev. S. S. Davis. The marriage ceremony of each of the daughters of Rev. S. S. Davis was performed by himself at the family residence, Summerville, Ga.

Paul H. Langdon is descended from a line of distinguished ancestry. He is a great grandson of Rev. Samuel Langdon, D.D., A. A. S., an ex-President of Harvard College, who was himself a son of Samuel, and the grandson of Philip L. who died at Boston, Mass., in Dec., 1697.

His early life was one of travel and adventure, and when quite young, he was associated with a party sent out by the United States Government on a surveying and scientific expedition, one of the objects of which was a reconnoissance of a route for a Pacific Railway, the one nearly determinate with the one over which the Union Pacific Railroad was subsequently built.

Samuel S. Davis, D. D. (326) acquired his early education in the neighborhood of his home, after which he entered Union College at Schenectady. But his uncle, Rev. Henry Davis, who was Professor of Greek in Union, having been called to the Presidency of Middlebury College, Vt., the nephew followed him thither, and was graduated at Middlebury College in 1812, but afterwards received his first degree ad eundem from Union College. After his graduation, he took charge of an academy at Castleton, Vt. In the fall of 1815, he entered Princeton Seminary, but before the close of the year he accepted an appointment as tutor in Union College, and withdrew from the seminary. After remaining at Union as tutor nearly two years, he returned to the seminary at the commencement of the winter session of 1817, and after two years of further study was regularly graduated in 1819. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Albany Oct. 22, 1819, and soon after was commissioned by the seminary authorities, with the cordial approval of the Synod of South Carolina and Georgia, to collect funds within its bounds to complete the endowment of a Seminary Professorship, which four years before that synod had resolved to found in connection with the Synod of North Carolina, each synod having assumed one half of the $30,000 to be raised. For this object Mr. Davis raised a large amount, but before the whole sum was completed the synod had embarked in the new effort to found the seminary now located at Columbia, S. C. He was ordained to the work of the ministry by the Presbytery of Albany Aug. 12, 1821. Immediately afterward he accepted a call from the Presbyterian Church at Darien, Ga., where he was installed Dec. 16, 1821, by the Presbytery of Georgia. His pastorate at Darien was short, having been dissolved April 5, 1823. But even in this short time he had received a considerable accession to the church to which he had given a decided impulse. From Darien Mr. Davis went to Camden, S. C. where he supplied the church (then called Bethesda) from March, 1823, for nearly a year, after which he supplied the church at Augusta, Ga., in connection with the Rev. Dr. Talmage. In Jan., 1825, he married Miss Mary Cuthbert, eldest daughter of Thomas Cumming, Esq., of Augusta, Ga. Feb. 4, 1827, he was elected pastor of the church at Camden, S. C. This call he accepted, but he was not installed. He supplied the church however as pastor until the close of 1830. Dec. 26, 1830, he was unanimously called again to be the pastor, and continued without installation in the service of the church until Jan. 10, 1833. After this he resided in Georgia many years. In 1833 he accepted an appointment as agent of the General Assembly's Board of Education. By his energy and tact he raised considerable sums of money during these years, both for the Board of Education and for the Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C. For about eighteen months, in 1841 and 1842, Mr. Davis held the position of Professor of Latin in Oglethorpe University at Milledgeville, Ga. In the summer of 1842, for the benefit of his health he went to his native place, Ballston Centre, N. Y., where he supplied the Presbyterian Church about a year. On his return to the South, and after an absence of eleven years from South Carolina, he was recalled by his former charge at Camden on May 4, 1845, and immediately entered on his labors there, but was not formally installed until April 3, 1847. He remained in this charge, performing his duties with fidelity and ability until, at his own request and because of ill-health, the pastoral relation was dissolved in April, 1851. The attachment between him and his people was strong and mutual. Immediately after his release Dr. Davis removed to Augusta, where he resided for the remainder of his life without a pastoral charge. He however took the care and supervision of Springfield Church, a large colored congregation near Augusta, numbering at one time fifteen hundred members, to which he gave a large amount of preaching and valuable counsel. In his last years he suffered much from ill-health. After 1857 his eyesight was seriously impaired, and at one time was almost lost. He died in the village of Summerville near Augusta, Ga., June 21, 1877, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. Dr. Davis was a true man, of much generosity and nobleness of character, and gifted with good judgment. In manners, he was a thorough gentleman. He made many and warm friends. He was fond of books, a fair scholar, a highly respectable preacher, an assiduous pastor and a truly pious man. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1845 from Union College. At the time of his death he was the oldest Presbyterian Minister in Georgia.

In Memoriam.

SESSION ROOM OF
THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, }
Augusta, Ga., Nov. 18, 1876.

The Session of this Church feel it to be their incumbent duty, at this their first meeting after the decease of the late Mrs. MARY CUTHBERT DAVIS, to put on record their deep sense of her inimitable excellence and high christian worth.

MRS. DAVIS, the wife of the venerable Dr. S. S. Davis, was the daughter of Thomas Cumming, for many years an elder of this congregation, and to whose sage counsels and munificent liberality, the Presbyterian Church of Augusta is greatly indebted. In early life, she became a member of the church on profession of faith, and for more than half a century her holy and consistent life and conversation shed a lustre upon the principles of Presbyterianism, which was so dear to her heart, not only because they embodied the creed of her fathers, but because she believed them to be founded on, and agreeable to the word of God.

While conscientiously devoted to her church, she was a christian of broad catholic views, loving and beloved of all who knew and served the Lord Jesus Christ. Her unobtrusive and deep piety prompted her to many acts of christian charity, and her alms were liberally distributed among the poor and suffering. She was a child of rare filial devotion; a sister living in the affections of her family; a wife, who for fifty years aided by her counsels and her prayers her devotedly attached husband in all his personal and professional duties, and supported him in all the trials of his private and public life; and a mother, tender and loving, who having dedicated her children to God, labored most faithfully to bring them up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." Ripe in grace, as she was in years, her death was a triumphant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The Session most profoundly sympathize with their former pastor, S. S. Davis D. D., in his irreparable loss, and sincerely pray that his sorrowing heart may share largely in the precious consolation of the Gospel which he so faithfully administered to others in their hours of tribulation. Whilst they are assured that the removal of his devoted and loving partner will deepen his interest in, and intensify his longings after that Heavenly Home, which the Blessed Redeemer is gone to prepare for all them who through faith and patience shall inherit the promises.

On motion, it was resolved that a copy of this testimonial be forwarded to Dr. Davis and family, and entered upon the Session Record.

He was long the benevolent and venerated President of the American Sunday School Union. Thomas Charlton Henry was born in Philadelphia, Sept. 22, 1790, and died at Charleston, S. In 1826, on account of ill-health, he made a visit to England and spent six months. He returned much improved in health. On the 1st of October the following year, he was taken with the yellow fever and died Oct. 4. The Rev. John Hough, in an address delivered at the semi-Centennial of Middlebury College, August 22, 1850, said: "Dr. Henry possessed many rich endowments. His person was elegant and attractive, and his manners affable and polished. In voice, look, and action, he possessed in an eminent degree the attributes of an accomplished orator. In classical and theological learning, he had few equals of his age and country. The corporation of Yale College in 1824 conferred on him the degree of D. D. At the commencement of the war for the Union, he enlisted in the volunteer service, and served with distinction to the end of the war. ANNA ELIZABETH DAVIS (378) was married May 22, 1863, to Louis Beck Smith. He was born in Albany, N. Y., Sept. 28, 1836, and died at Ballston, N. Y., Oct. 6, 1872. They had no children. He was a son of John Smith, a prominent and leading citizen of Albany, whose father was Israel Smith, one of the projectors with Gov. DeWitt Clinton and others of the Erie Canal, the plans for which were made in his (Israel Smith's) office. A noted characteristic of this Smith family was hatred of oppression, and love of liberty, the radical exponents of this trait being Gerritt Smith and his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Louis Beck Smith's English ancestor was William Smith, who was born at Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire, England, Feb. 2, 1655. He married Martha, daughter of Henry Tunstall, of Putney, in the County of Surry, England, Nov. 26, 1675. Soon after his marriage he was appointed Gov. of Tangiers, by Charles II, which place with Bombay was given him by the King of Portugal, But the project of erecting an establishment upon the coast did not succeed, and he returned to England in 1683. He came to America, landing in

New York, Aug. 6, 1686. He purchased a large tract of land in Brookhaven township, L. I., which was erected into a Manor called St. George's Manor. He was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court, of the Province of New York, by Gov. Slaughter in 1691, and Chief Justice by Gov. Thatcher in 1692. He died Feb. 18, 1705.

Louis Beck Smith was graduated from the law department of the University of Albany, N. Y., Nov. 25, 1859. The faculty of the law school at that time were : Ira Loomis, Amasa J. Parker, and Amos Dean, all noted men. Being unusually gifted, his instructors predicted for him a brilliant career. He was successfully engaged in the practice of law for two years.

The following sketch was written by his law partner, soon after his death.

"On Sunday of this week, in the promise of a vigorous useful manhood, died Louis Beck Smith, Secretary of the Atlantic Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Albany, N. Y. Mr. Smith was well known to Albanians, and it requires no eloquence of ours to present to them his virtues and his promise. Descended from a line of honorable ancestry, his grandfather Israel Smith, and his father John Smith, well known to the people of Albany, who half a century ago were leading citizens of the Capitol City, gave to Louis the most prominent features of his character. Simplicity of manners, integrity in business, and the strictest honesty in every relation in life. Educated as a lawyer, he was heralded by the older members of the profession as one promising great usefulness. But his health not being then good, obliged him after a few years to give up the profession he loved, and to accept a more active life. This he did by first acting as General Agent of the N. Y. Life Insurance Co., in Albany, N. Y., and afterward in Cleveland, Ohio. But he was not willing to remain a subordinate, and in 1868, with an amount of labor that probably laid the seeds of his early death, he organized the now prosperous Company, with which he remained to the time of his death. With hosts of friends and without an enemy, his epitaph is written in the tears of his associates, and in the sincere respect of the whole community."

The Pastor of one of the Cleveland Churches with which for a short time he was connected, thus speaks of him.

"I recall Mr. Smith's connection with my church, and my indebtedness to him, with peculiar interest. He was one of the men on whom a Pastor can depend for any good work. One soon learned to confide in him, and to love him. He was at his post in the Sunday school, and in the prayer meeting. He was peculiarly true, upright, guileless. Although he was in my church but a short time, I retain the most pleasing recollections of his worth. His countenance was an open letter, in which might be read the christian principles and impulses that governed him."

The wife of a prominent lawyer in Albany, in writing of him after his death said :

"Never did I come in contact with a stranger who so completely won me as he did, and the tribute paid to him by his Pastor was not more beautiful than true."

HENRY DAVIS (328)* remained at home with his father during his boyhood, assisting in the cultivation of the farm. At the urgent request of his uncle, Rev. Henry Davis, then President of Middlebury College, he entered that college when quite young. But his love of agricultural life was so great, that at the end of two years he left college, and returned to his father's in Ballston, and resumed his favorite pursuit, the cultivation of the soil, where he remained until the farm was sold in 1842. He then hired a farm near Ballston Lake, where he remained a year, he then purchased Prospect Farm, where he has since resided, enjoying the respect and confidence of his neighbors and townsmen. From the beautiful place, the partner of his youth, the sharer of his joys and sorrows for more than half a century, was called, a "shock of grain fully ripe," to enter the rest "that remaineth for God's people." In a green old age, surrounded by his family who vie with each other in their efforts to render his life pleasant, waits our friend and cousin for the summons to "come up higher." In the language of another, "The frost on his locks has not chilled his heart, and his love for his children is akin to the love of the great Master for His children, and although going down to life's sunset, may the chill of its twilight be long delayed."

"He was the last surviving child of Dr. Samuel Davis, one of the oldest and best known physicians of Saratoga County, his brothers, Samuel I. Davis, LL.D., dying at Augusta, Ga., in 1886, and Dr. John K. Davis at Troy, N. Y., in 1867, and his sister, Mrs. A. M. Henry, widow of T. Charlton Henry, D.D., at Charleston, West Va., in 1875.

Henry Davis was a man of kindly and charitable disposition, in manner a thorough gentleman of the old school, very domestic and retiring in his tastes, never seeking prominence in social, political or religious life. He endeared himself to his friends, of whom he had many strong personal ones and no enemies, so that it can be truly said that his best monument is in the love and respect of his fellow men.

Never desiring from his boyhood days to the present time to live in any other town than Ballston, his life was peaceful and contented, and his death at a ripe old age was a happy release from the physical pains incident to it. A consummation attained by few.

The Honorable Thomas Treadwell was born in the year 1743 at Smithtown, L. I. He graduated at Princeton, N. J., and studied law under Chancellor Livingston.

Thompson in his History of Long Island says: "He was one of the most useful men of his time. He was well educated, and distinguished for firmness and prudence during the difficult and trying period of the Revolution. He was almost constantly engaged in public business; was a member of the Provincial Congress from 1771 with power to establish a new form of government. He was a member of the first Senate of this State under the Constitution and seems in all respects to have been fitted for the perilous time in which he lived." He was one of three constituting the "Committee of Safety" while the Constitution of this State was being organized in 1773; and was for many years the only surviving member of that memorable body.—Seward's Introduction to Natural History of the State of New York; See also Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit.

He was a Representative in the "Continental Congress" in Philadelphia in 1772-76; in 1775 was elected to the "Provincial Congress," sitting in the City of New York. In 1776, he was, with others, elected to represent Suffolk Co., L. I. This Provincial Congress met at the Court House in Westchester Co., but sat in Fishkill, Nov. 8th. In 1778, he was delegated to the Convention at Poughkeepsie to deliberate on the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. He was also appointed during the same year Judge of Probate in the city of New York, which office he held until Surrogates were appointed for each county. In 1791, he was elected to represent Suffolk, Kings and Queens counties in the Continental Congress, then sitting in Philadelphia, (to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Townsend). In 1793, he was again elected to represent these counties, which he continued to do until he moved to Plattsburg, N. Y. In 1804, he was elected Senator for the Northern District, and in 1807 he was appointed Surrogate of Clinton Co., which office he held until his death, which took place at Plattsburg, Dec. 25, 1831. Archib's Great Uncle

Henry Davis (323) received his elementary education at Clinton Academy, E. Hampton, L. I. He entered Yale College, New Haven, Conn., during the Presidency of Dr. Stiles, and graduated in 1796, with the highest honors. Immediately afterwards, he was appointed tutor in Williams College, Mass. At the end of the second year with that college, he was chosen to fill the same office in Yale College, and for five years performed its duties in that institution with distinguished success. He studied theology with Dr. Charles Backus, of Somers, Conn., and soon became known as a preacher of uncommon ability and eloquence. In 1801 he was appointed Professor of Divinity in his Alma Mater, but symptoms of pulmonary disease manifesting themselves, he declined the honor. His health being sufficiently recruited by a sea voyage, in 1806 he accepted the professorship of Greek tendered him by the trustees of Union College, Schenectady. In 1809, he was chosen President of Middlebury College, Vt., and by his talents and energy as an instructor and disciplinarian, increased the usefulness and celebrity of that institution. In 1814, he was invited to occupy the chair of instruction, which he had before filled in Union College, but a sense of duty detained him still longer at Middlebury. In July 1817, after much previous negotiation, he accepted the Presidency of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., having in the preceding year declined that of Yale College, New Haven, then made vacant by the death of Dr. Timothy Dwight. Dr. Davis was actively interested in establishing the Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y., and in other places and efforts for increasing the number of well qualified ministers of the Gospel. He was prominently connected with several benevolent and christian institutions, and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions numbered him as one of its corporate members from the second year of its existence, until the period of his decease.

Hamilton College, while Dr. Davis was its President, sent forth many who have become distinguished in the sphere of professional and literary life. In April 1833, owing to increased bodily infirmities, he resigned his office, the institution being at the time in a state of advancing prosperity. As a writer and public speaker, Dr. Davis was highly gifted. His elocution was marked by a great regard for emphasis, and a pleasing modulation of voice. His chief discourses were: An inaugural oration pronounced at Middlebury, Vt., Feb. 10, 1810; A Sermon preached to the candidates for the Baccalaureate in Middlebury, Vt.; A sermon delivered on the day of general election at Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 12, 1815, before the Legislature of Vermont; A sermon preached before the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, at the seventh Annual Meeting held at Hartford, Conn., Sept. 1, 1816; An address delivered at commencement, August 27, 1828, to the candidates for the Bachelors degree in Hamilton College; A farewell address to the Students in Hamilton College, delivered at the public exhibition of the Junior class, April 17, 1833, and a narrative of the embarrassments and decline of Hamilton College, April 1833. The active period of Dr. Davis' life was spent in college. He was a tall man, slender, erect, and of manly, dignified appearance. His countenance, though indicating great decision of character, easily relaxed into a pleasant smile. He was gentlemanly in his manners, and agreeable in his intercourse, partly from his amiable and genial temper, and partly from his large stores of general knowledge, which were always at his command. He possessed a firmness that was absolutely invincible, an integrity that never faltered under any circumstances. His mind was trained to logical processes, and this discovered itself especially in his preaching. His manner in the pulpit was simple, natural, forcible. He was a noble specimen of a man, a minister, and an officer of college.

Obituary notice of Mrs. Hannah P. Davis, wife of Rev. Henry Davis, published after her death.

Mrs. Davis was born at Smithtown, L. I., April 10, 1771. She was a daughter of the Hon. Thomas Treadwell of that place, a gentleman of probity and worth, whose name appears in the annals of the period, who while living had the warm regards of a large circle of relatives, and was honored with tokens of public esteem. At the close of the Revolutionary War, he removed with his family to

REV. HENRY DAVIS, D.D.
SECOND PRESIDENT OF HAMILTON COLLEGE.

New York City. There Mrs. Davis was educated, enjoying the advantages of the best schools of that early period. Her intellectual powers naturally strong, were thus disciplined and refined, and embraced those sound moral principles which guided her in after life. When she reached her eighteenth year, she became a resident of Plattsburg, Clinton Co., N. Y. There she remained until her marriage in 1801 to Rev. Henry Davis, then an instructor in Yale College, and whose allotment it was to spend his life in prominent connection with several literary institutions. In New Haven, Conn., Schenectady, N. Y. and Middleburg, Vt. places to which the conjugal relations successively introduced her, Mrs. Davis had many deeply attached friends, and she shed around her an influence alike genial and salutary. When in 1817, Dr. Davis was elected President of Hamilton College, another important sphere of duty opened before her in Clinton. Here as elsewhere, and to the end of her days, her influence was felt widely and for good. So strikingly prominent were her mental traits, and solid and practical her acquirements, such were her sympathetic affections and diversified social qualities, her irrigations of wit and humor, and the outflows of her taste and good sense, her sprightliness, decision and energy, combined with affability, kindness of heart and decorous regard for the welfare of others, that she has left behind her no doubtful impression of a character, in which elements of worth, symmetry and usefulness met and commingled. Exemplary in the domestic and social relations, she made her home a place of attraction. Soon after becoming a resident of Clinton, she was chosen President of the Female Missionary Society, Western New York, for many years a highly efficient association, retaining her official connection, and yielding it active support until it was finally merged in the agencies of the American Home Missionary Society. In young men having in view the gospel ministry, she took a deep and affectionate interest, and in different ways, gave to not a few of them, encouragement and aid.

During the latter portion of her life especially, her mind was much set upon the spread of religious tracts, and other evangelical and useful publications. Few persons manifest a deeper appreciation than she did of the obligations and privileges of experimental piety. The searching character of her views respecting the "interior life" and its appropriate outward exhibitions, may in part account for the fact, that while others saw in her what to them appeared experiences and evidences of christian character, it was her wont to refuse them the comforts of christian hope. A few years since, he with whom for more than half a century, she shared life's enjoyments and trials, was taken from her by death. The shock which she then received it seemed would bring on her own dissolution. But her vigor rallied. Four years of reprieve—for so she termed them—were graciously allowed her, to her not those of moroseness, querulousness or vain repinings, but rather of cheerfulness, gratitude and activity in duty. In these years, she showed herself still possessed in a good degree of her mental and bodily vigor, enjoying the society of friends, and imparting pleasure and improvement to those who sought her acquaintance and conversation. To private meditation and prayer she now gave increased attention. Her mind seemed habitually and intently given to preparation for eternity. Her hour was nigh. As however the "earthly house" decayed and was ready to be dissolved, her mind turned with more of resoluteness and faith to the rich promises of the gospel.

Comforted by the presence of her children and other relatives, soothed and cheered by the singing of appropriate hymns, and amidst many prayers in her behalf, offered to Him who is the "Resurrection and the Life," she met her last foe, and passed away to the land of rest.

By the kind permission of Mrs. A. C. Maltbie, a granddaughter of Rev. Henry Davis, and who spent her childhood and youthful days at Clinton, we copy and insert a pen picture of "The Clinton Home," from a "Rescript of the Treadwell and Platt genealogy," compiled and published by her in 1883.

The Clinton Home.

How vivid and tender are the memories of the old Davis Homestead, the ex-President's house, on College Hill, at Clinton! Almost thirty years since, the last dear aged pilgrim there laid aside her burdens, and "fell asleep."

Bereft of all who gave it its peculiar charm, it still stands, though the mosses of ages are gathering about it. What a delightful meeting-place it was! What an attractive group of sons and daughters and nieces once dwelt there rejoicingly with the dear elderly people who gave the place its special attractions! Rarely elastic were those hearts! There was always welcome at that hearthstone and that hospitable board! What keen mother wit was Grandmother's, and what stately bearing in her middle life! One said to me a few days since, "I shall never forget how Dr. Davis passed up the aisle of the College Chapel. Clad in his long, blue, clerical cloak, hat in hand, white haired, and tall, instinct with gracious dignity, he gave a courteous half bow on the right and on the left, making every one of his waiting audience conscious of a personal salutation." Who of us have forgotten his tales of college pranks, and the rare high-bred courtesy with which the aged couple entertained the prominent people of their own and later generations who followed them into their retired life? How many yet remember that "one hoss shay," and the eminently capable lady who drove in it so often all the country through. Yet more would recall the roomier carriage and the two camelot cloaks—always sure to be needed if left behind even in mid-summer. O! those journeys and rides with such a grandfather and grandmother to explain and suggest. What will ever compensate children who lack such experiences? We could not help growing up with a reverence for them! They had such wide experience and such just views of men and measures, and each had such strong individuality, the four* whom I remember; there

The storm that wrecks the winter sky,
No more disturbs their sweet repose,
Than summer evening's latest sigh
That shuts the rose.

With the place itself, too, are a multitude of other associations that spring up

*By the fourth, I allude to my great grandmother Treadwell.

in loving hearts. What could one not find that was sweet and good in that broad old-fashioned garden! What a grand frolicking place were the carriage-houses and barns! What a charm was in the wild glen and the rustic seat, in and around which the grandchildren whiled away many happy hours! and the stream, where some of us (one, who died young and beloved) built miniature dams, and fished for crabs and minnows. One special fireside picture springs up at memory's beck. Aunt Polly Davis sits there in her yellow rocker! dear, slender, loving old lady! and knits away and nods in the twilight, her black velvet bag and tin ear-trumpet on the carpet-covered stool beside her. I can see the semi-circle of saucers that sat before her at table, and her barley coffee pot that used to stand on the Franklin. Those were toothsome home-made crackers, such as long before my time brought forth Aunt Anne's proverb, "Lo, she filleth her bag with crackers, and she maketh a great craunching." It was almost all the noise she ever did make while I knew her, except occasionally to make her cane fly and scatter the numerous cats, for which she had an utter detestation, that found welcome in the old house, or to sit in the great kitchen and clap the lace and muslin of her caps that she loved to clear starch herself. There were long years of invalidism before she and her well beloved "brother" were permitted to put on eternal youth. When the infirmities of age and lingering illness came upon him, it was a great victory to say as often as he did, "The Lord reigneth." The orchards, the front lawn, its red shale walk, the sweet locusts, the cherry trees, the swing, the old porch, the honey-suckles, each had its charm.

The Saturday night-keeping that gathered the family at sun down, the Sunday evening visits, the old tunes we sang, and the tall venerable form of him who leaning on the back of his chair approached the throne of the Infinite as the humblest suppliant for His mercy, can never cease from our remembrance.

HENRY DAVIS, JR. (398) was married Jan. 1, 1834, at Hamilton, Madison Co., N. Y., to Emily M. Turnier, of Syracuse, N. Y., who died at Syracuse, Nov. 15, 1871. They had no children.

Henry Davis, Jr., was graduated at Williams College, Mass., in the class of 1824, at the age of nineteen years. He studied law, and settled in Syracuse, N. Y., where he soon attained to a very large, and lucrative practice. He is said to have been at the time of his death for so young a man, one of the ablest counsellors and advocates in the State. His health becoming impaired by too close application to business, he went to Europe, by the advice of his physician, hoping thereby to benefit his health. Not receiving the benefit that he had anticipated, he went to Graefenberg to try the water cure. Soon after his arrival there, he had an attack of paralysis, from the effects of which he did not recover, and he died Sept. 1, 1844. Having already communicated his intentions of returning home in a few months, the sad news of his sudden death was a great shock to his aged parents, invalid wife, and his brother and sister who were devotedly attached to him, as well as to his many friends in Syracuse, and wherever he was known.

At a large meeting of the members of the bar, of Onondaga County, held at the Syracuse House, in the village of Syracuse, Oct. 7, 1844, for the purpose of expressing their respect for the memory of their former associate and friend, Henry Davis, Jr., Daniel Pratt Esq., was called to the chair, and the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously passed.

Whereas, The afflicting intelligence having been received, that our late fellow citizen and brother, Henry Davis, Jr., who had visited Europe for the benefit of health in the fall of 1843, departed this life at Graefenberg, in the province of Silesia, and Empire of Austria, in Sept. last, and wishing to express our sincere and heartfelt sorrow at the mournful and unexpected dispensation by which our community have lost, not only a high minded and excellent citizen, but a worthy and talented member of the legal profession, therefore

Resolved, That we greatly deplore the death of Mr. Davis, that we all knew him and most of us intimately, that we ever found him a kind friend, a good citizen, and an honest and able counsellor, that we cordially sympathize with his family and relatives, at a bereavement which has thus suddenly deprived them of the society of one whom we always received as a kind and estimable brother, son and husband, that we especially mourn in their behalf, that he died in the land of strangers, far removed from those affectionate consolations which he would have both received and imparted, had he been permitted to depart from this world in the midst of his friends, and surrounded by the endearments of home and kindred.

Resolved, That in testimony of the high regard we cherish for the memory of the deceased, and of the great loss we have sustained individually, and as members of the bar, we will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolutions be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and transmitted to the wife, father, brother, and sister of Mr. Davis, and that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the village papers.

Harvey Baldwin and James R. Lawrence Esqrs., with brief and appropriate remarks addressed the meeting, after which the resolutions were adopted and the meeting adjourned.

JASPER SMITH, Secretary.

DANIEL PRATT, Chairman.

MARY ANN DAVIS (399) was married Sept. 26, 1831, to Rev. Ebenezer Davenport Maltbie, who was born in Stamford, Conn., Jan. 20, 1799, and died in Syracuse, N. Y., July 10, 1858. Their children were:

- 403. i. Annie Catherine, b. in Hamilton, N. Y., Feb. 27, 1833.

- 415. vi. Mary E. S. b. Feb. 1, 1874.
- 416. vii. Annie Treadwell, b. Feb. 2, 1878.

MALTBIE D. BABCOCK (410) was married Oct. 4, 1882, to Katherine E. Tallman.

The Rev. Ebenezer Davenport Maltbie, who married Mary Ann Davis (399), was a son of David Maltbie, of Stamford, Conn., who was descended in a direct line from Capt. William Maltbie, who was active in the military service in England, and came to this country soon after the death of Oliver Cromwell, and the retirement of his son Richard. On the maternal side, he was a descendant in a direct line, in the twenty-third generation, of Ormus de Davenport, who was born in England in 1086. The mother of Ebenezer Davenport Maltbie was Nancy Davenport, a daughter of Silas Davenport, she was born Dec. 21, 1765, and died in 1815. (See Davenport genealogy, by Amzi B. Davenport).

Mr. Maltbie's life was remarkably eventful. When he was about four years old, his father removed to New York City, and at a suitable age engaged in business. The earlier part of of his life, and until he became of age, was spent in the employ of David R. Lambert, at that time one of the leading merchants of New York. His fidelity and usefulness were such, that at that time he received flattering and advantageous offers of establishment in mercantile business in New York and New Orleans, and his prospects in life seemed to be those of a useful and prosperous merchant. He turned aside at this point to enter upon a different sphere, and began to prepare himself for the ministry. He entered Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., in the fall of 1821, and was graduated in the class of 1824. He immediately entered Andover Theological Seminary, where he studied Theology. After he left Andover, he was five years tutor and Chaplain at Hamilton College, Clinton. He was first settled as Pastor at Hamilton, Madison Co., N. Y., where he remained four years, leaving on account of impaired health. He was never a permanent Pastor afterwards, and turned his attention to teaching.

He was Principal of the Hudson River Seminary, at Stockport, Columbia Co., N. Y., two years, and eight years Principal of the Lansingburg Academy. He was an enthusiastic teacher, and many of his pupils fill high and prominent places in all parts of the country. In Syracuse, where he spent the last years of his life, he employed his leisure systematically in doing good. His nice appreciation of whatever is beautiful in character, or action, diffused itself like a perfume wherever he went, making his every day influence a blessing. He died after a brief illness, universally mourned and loved. As he was laid to his final rest towards the still Sabbath sunset, a group of Germans whom he had befriended in their religious needs came forward, and sung by his open grave a touching dirge in their native language. What conquering general was ever honored so enviably?

Mrs. Mary A. Maltbie, wife of Rev. Ebenezer Davenport Maltbie, is thus spoken of in a communication from her friend and former Pastor.

“As one who knew Mrs. Maltbie several years in the relation of Pastor and intimate friend, we speak only the profound conviction of our heart when we say, that we never knew in any other instance, such queenly majesty, blended with such unaffected humility, such retiring modesty, such simple and cordial affability. The type of her piety was of the most beautiful kind. Simple and strong in her faith in Jesus, she trusted entirely in the merits of His death on the one hand, and ardently "loved his appearing" on the other. She was the founder and first President of the Home for Aged and Needy Females."

At a meeting of the executive board of the managers of the Home Association soon after her death, the following among other resolutions were passed.

Resolved, That in the wide spread sorrow which is felt for the loss of the revered and lamented Mrs. Mary A. Maltbie, it is eminently fitting that this Association should give utterance to their deep sense of bereavement.

Resolved, That as Managers of this Institution, of which our beloved friend was prime originator and founder, we deeply lament the removal of one who was so richly qualified by gifts and graces intellectual and spiritual, and still more by the glowing benevolence and tender sympathy of an affectionate heart for the position of President of this charitable Institution, over which she presided with such eminent wisdom, moderation, dignity forbearance and christian courtesy.

A tribute to the memory and worth of Mrs. Maltbie, from a friend.

"Will the ladies of the Home permit one who has long known and loved Mrs. Maltbie, to add to their testimonial resolutions her feeble tribute of affection and respect to the memory of one so long and closely associated with them in their Institution, which might almost be said to have been founded by her efforts and prayers, and when prevented by failing health to meet with you, was ever ready with her pen to send kindly words of counsel and encouragement. Her zeal though earnest was always practical, and aimed at the accomplishment of the greatest good, with limited means. Of her early life, of her highly cultivated mind, of the social and domestic influences which developed the beautiful symmetry of character which she ever exhibited, I leave others to speak, who can do her better justice.

Her efforts to benefit others were not confined to the Home. She was ready at all times to aid in every good work. The poor in our midst have lost a kind and judicious helper, whose heart and purse were ever open to their cry, and the toil worn missionaries laboring in far distant lands will feel, as the sad intelligence of her death reaches them, that they have one less tried and faithful friend, to bless and aid them with her alms and prayers. None but her most intimate friends know the extent of her charities, or the self sacrificing spirit with which they were bestowed. She denied herself luxuries to impart comfort to others. It was emphatically true of her, that she 'did all to the glory of God,' This was the incentive to all her actions. Though richly endowed by nature and education, and fitted to adorn and shed lustre over any position she might occupy, she was retiring and modest even to diffidence. In the fullest sense of the expression she was a christian lady. No one could approach her and not feel this. Always dignified and courteous, yet never repelling the meanest child of want, she was remarkable for her delicate consideration of others, forgetful of herself, in striving to promote the happiness of all around her. Her last words to the writer just before her death were: 'Comfort my children.' 'Tis not too much to say, that through all her life she adorned the doctrine she professed, and at the last she 'was sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, like one who wraps the drapery of his couch around him, and lies down to pleasant dreams,' and thus:

Another hand is beckoning us,
 Another call is given ;
 And glows once more with angel steps
 The path which reaches heaven.

The blessing of her quiet life
 Fell on us like the dew,
 And good thoughts where her footsteps pressed
 Like fairy blossoms grew.

Sweet prompting unto kindest words
 Were in her every look ;
 We read her face, as one who reads
 A true and holy book.

Fold her, O Father, in Thine arms,
 And let her henceforth be
 A messenger of love between
 Our human hearts and Thee.

And grant that she who trembling here,
 Mistrusted all her powers,
 May welcome to her holier home
 The well beloved of ours."

THOMAS TREADWELL DAVIS (402) was married in 1837, to Sarah Matilda Henry (367), daughter of Rev. Thomas Charlton Henry, and wife Abigail Maria Davis (327). Their children were:

- 418. ii. Alexander Henry, b. Oct. 25, 1839, in Syracuse, N. Y.
- 419. iii. Anna Eudora, b. Oct. 12, 1845, in Syracuse, N. Y., d. Aug. 6, 1878.

ANNA EUDORA DAVIS (419) married Ernest Dickman, of the U. S. Navy. He was on Admiral Farragut's staff, and served with distinction through the war. They had one child.

- 420. i. ——— d. in infancy.

ALEXANDER HENRY DAVIS (418) was married first to Julia D. Pearce, daughter of Edward and Harriet (Bullock) Pearce, of Providence, R. I. She lived but a few months, and he was married second in 1868, to Caroline May, daughter of John Joseph May, and wife Caroline (Danforth) May, of Boston, Mass. Mr. Davis was educated at Heidleberg, Germany. He served with distinction in the War of the Rebellion, and was promoted for meritorious services. He was Adjutant of the 3d N. Y. Artillery, and was promoted to A. A. General U. S. Vol., March 11, 1863. He was appointed by Gov. Hill to represent the State of New York, at the unveiling of the Washington Monument, Feb. 22, 1885. He resides in Syracuse, N. Y. They have two children.

421. i. Mary May, b. in 1870.

422. ii. Ethel, b. in 1873.

The following obituary notice of Thomas Treadwell Davis, was published in a Syracuse paper the day after his death :

" Our citizens will learn with deep regret, the announcement of the death of the Hon. Thomas T. Davis which occurred in the city of Washington, yesterday morning. Mr. Davis has been a great sufferer for several years, but he has borne his bodily afflictions with christian resignation, while he has sought health with a courage and tenacity of purpose truly heroic. To his friends it has been evident, for some time, that his death could not long be delayed, but nevertheless it falls with a crushing weight upon the community which has been greatly honored by his talents, and whose material prosperity he has done much to advance.

Thomas Treadwell Davis was born at Middlebury, Vermont, on the 22nd of August, 1810. He was a son of the Rev. Henry Davis, D. D., at that time President of Middlebury College, but who seven years later accepted the Presidency of Hamilton College, and moved with his family to Clinton. The father was one of the ablest educators in the United States, and did much by his abilities to advance the interests of Hamilton. He retained his Presidency until 1831, and lived until 1852, dying at the age of 80 years, universally respected and beloved. Mr. Davis received his preparatory education in the academy at Clinton, and entered Hamilton College at the age of seventeen, graduating therefrom in the Class of 1831, with fine standing as a scholar. He immediately commenced the study of the law, in the office of his brother, Henry Davis, Esq., in this city, and after his admission to the bar, formed a partnership with his brother, which continued until the death of the senior member of the firm in 1844. He subsequently formed a partnership with James S. Leach, Esq., which continued until the failing health of Mr. Davis admonished him that further devotion to the duties of his profession was impracticable. At the bar Mr. Davis deservedly took a high rank, being thoroughly versed in the principles and practice of the law, and an easy and engaging speaker. He was particularly skillful in drawing pleadings and legal papers of all varieties.

He was a man of the finest business abilities, and the varied and extensive enterprises in which he engaged interfered with his entire devotion to his profession, but while he won fortune in the one he maintained his reputation in the other. It rarely happens that the successful man of business and the acute and able lawyer are so well combined as they were in the person of Mr. Davis. Always taking a deep interest in politics, often espousing in public the cause of the party to which he was attached, it was not until the fall of 1862 that he consented to become a candidate for office. In that year his friends urged the nomination to Congress upon him, and after a spirited and protracted canvass with able competitors, he received the Republican nomination, and was elected by a large majority. He was the first representative from this district as now constituted. He was re-elected without serious opposition in 1864. In Congress he occupied an influential position, although the conservative cast of his mind alienated him somewhat from the more radical portion of the party. His business ability met with its due recognition in the committees, and he was heard with pleasure upon the floor whenever he spoke upon public questions.

It was during his congressional career that his health, always frail, became decidedly impaired, and since his retiracy he traveled extensively in this country and in Europe with a view to its amendment, submitting in two instances to severe surgical operations which he bore with Spartan fortitude. For the last few years our citizens have seen but little of him, but whenever he has been among us he has been most cordially welcomed, and the most earnest wishes have been extended for his restoration. He was a model citizen, public-spirited, generous, and energetic, and the long period of his residence here had endeared him to us, not less on account of his commanding abilities than for the geniality of his intercourse with his fellow men, and exalted worth of his character. He was a man of rare literary attainments and the widest culture, a student of the sciences, and a master in history and belles lettres. He had delivered a number of orations before literary and collegiate associations, and our citizens had frequently the privilege, and always the pleasure of listening to scholarly addresses from his lips. His eulogy on Daniel Webster, delivered in this city twenty years ago, was a model of pure and elegant English, as it was a most appreciative tribute to the memory of the departed statesman. As scholar, lawyer, citizen, and patriot, the memory of Thomas T. Davis will long be held in remembrance by the city with which for nearly half a century his name was associated, and whose interests he did so much to subserve. He leaves a widow, and a son and daughter. His remains will reach here to-morrow, and his funeral will be attended from St. Paul's Church on Sunday afternoon."

The Hon. James S. Leach, of Syracuse, N. Y., who was a law partner of Mr. Davis for many years pays the following tribute to his memory :

"I knew the late Thomas T. Davis from his college days until his death. I was associated with him as a partner in the practice of law from 1850 to 1870, and during that time I knew him intimately and well, and deemed him a faultless man. During my long and intimate acquaintance with him, I can truthfully say that I never saw a flaw in his character. He was ripe scholar, a profound lawyer, an able advocate."

"His life was gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, 'This was a man.'"

BENJAMIN DAVIS (324) was married Sept. 30, 1804, to Abigail Foster, of Southampton, L. I. She was a daughter of David Foster, and was born Jan. 80, 1779, died at Sodus, Wayne Co., N. Y., Feb. 12, 1872. Her husband died at same place Feb. 9, 1859. Benjamin Davis chose teaching as a profession. He taught in the Clinton Academy, at E. Hampton, L. I., and, also taught at one time a private school in the Davis homestead at E. Hampton. He left E. Hampton, Oct. 13, 1804, and was the last male descendant of our ancestor to leave the place where the ancestor had settled, more than a century before that time. He taught in Whitestown, Paris, Pompey, N. Y., and other places adjacent, and in 1824 removed to Rose, Wayne Co., N. Y., where he bought a farm. He removed from Rose to Sodus, in the same County, where he died. They had one child.

The following obituary notice was published in a Wayne Co., paper at the time of his death:

"Died, at Sodus, on the 9th instant, Mr. Benjamin Davis. He was born in Stonington, Conn., Feb. 4, 1774. He was one of the most successful school teachers of his time. He experienced religion and joined the Presbyterian Church about sixteen years since. In his early life he sat under the preaching of Dr. Lyman Beecher, then commencing his labor as a minister of the gospel on Long Island. He was distinguished for the strictest morality, integrity and christian character. He hated iniquity and vice in all their forms, but loved the gospel, and especially the doctrine of grace. In his will he did not forget the wants of a dying world. He left the principal part of his fortune, which was not large, to objects of christian benevolence. He has left an aged and pious widow to mourn his departure."

Obituary notice of Benjamin Payne, Jr. (434) published in a daily paper at Augusta, Ga., at the time of his death.

"Died, in this city on the 27th inst. Mr. Benjamin Payne, in the 69th year of his age. It is thirty-six years since he came to this city, where he has uniformly maintained the character of an upright and honest man. He was not more distinguished by his intelligence, than beloved for his modest deportment, and benevolent disposition.

The hand of want was never opened to him in vain, and misery ever met in him a compassionate friend. Towards the end of his life he embraced the Christian religion, after a thorough investigation of its evidence. He illustrated its precepts by a strict walk within the pale of its ordinances.

For some time before his last illness his friends had observed a gradual failure in him, of the powers of life, and had probably intimated it to him. But he himself seemed sensible from the moment of serious illness, that he was on his death bed, and so told his physician. On his remarking that he hoped for the same relief that he had given in previous attacks, he answered, that 'he had lived to a good old age, and was willing to die.' "

SETH PAYNE (435) was a large land holder in Southold. He removed to some other part of the country many years ago, and all trace of him and his family has been lost.

PHEBE PAYNE (439) married a Mr. Gager, and had two sons. No trace of them can be found.

CLEOPATRA CONKLIN (426) was married Feb. 27, 1781, to Ebenezer Coe, son of Joseph and Abigail (Curtis) Coe, of Middlefield, Conn. He was born in Middlefield, July 9, 1755, and was a descendant in the sixth generation, of Robert Coe, who was born in Suffolkshire, England, in 1596. With his wife Anna, born in 1591, and their three sons, they sailed from Ipswich, Suffolkshire, in company with seventy-nine others in the ship Francis, John Cutting, Master, April 10, 1634. and arrived in Boston, Mass., the following June. He settled in Watertown, Mass., near Boston, and was made a freeman there Sept. 3, 1634. The Coe family had resided in Suffolkshire for many generations. The earliest notice of them is in Fox's Book of Martyrs, which states that "Robert Coe" (or Coe), of Millford, Suffolkshire, was burned at the stake by Queen Mary, Sept. 1555, at Yexford, in that Shire. A full account of his trial and defence is given by Fox. Vol. 3, p. 349. (See Coe Genealogy by Rev. David B. Coe.)

Dr. ISAAC COE (448) was married to Rebecca Cook, daughter of Major Daniel Cook, of Geneva, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1805. She was born Jan. 16, 1782.

Before studying medicine and removing to the West, he was engaged in the manufacture of Glass at Utica, N. Y. He was one of the earliest who attempted that enterprise in the United States. He was broken up by the English exporters. After accumulating property in the West, he returned to Utica, and sought out those who had lost by his enterprise, and their children, and paid them all with interest. After his brother Ebenezer was prepared for the practice of medicine, he left Utica, and they went together to Northern Virginia, where they were in partnership in the practice of medicine for some years, when Isaac took his wife and children, and went to Indianapolis, Ind., his wife and daughters riding in a "one horse shay," himself on horseback. He was for many years very successful in the practice of his profession, and was foremost in every good work. To men like him and the Hon. James M. Ray, an account of whose life and labors may be found in succeeding pages of this book, and a few other men who laid the foundation of the city in righteousness, is Indianapolis indebted for her present prosperity. The children of Isaac Coe, and wife were:

- 454. i. Maria Rebecca, b. in Utica, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1806, d. at Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 5, 1845,

- 457. iv. Henry Isaac, b. in Indianapolis, April 6, 1826.

MARIA REBECCA COE (454) was married in Indianapolis; Nov. 15, 1826, to James Mitchel Ray, who was born in Caldwell, N. J., Dec. 23, 1800. He was a son of Andrew Ray, who was born in Kippen, Scotland, in 1771. He was the only son of John and Agnes (Watts) Ray, both of whom died in Kippen, Scotland. Date of death of John Ray unknown. His wife died July 20, 1793. Andrew Ray came to this country soon after the death of his mother, and was married July 20, 1795, to Mary McChesney, of Newark, N. J., who was born March 21, 1774, and died at the residence of her son, James M. Ray, in Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 2, 1854. Her husband died at Indianapolis, Dec. 24, 1827. The children of James M. Ray, and wife Maria Rebecca Coe were:

- 458. i. Cornelia Mary, b. in Indianapolis, in 1827.
- 459. ii. Charles Andrew, b. in Indianapolis, Sept. 23, 1829.
- 460. iii. Eliza Blake, b. in Indianapolis, July 23, 1831.

From the "Presbyterian Reunion Memorial Volume" published in 1870, by DeWitt C. Lent & Co., 451 Broome Street, N. Y., we copy the following account of the life and labors of James Mitchel Ray:

"James Mitchel Ray, son of Andrew, (from Kippen, Scotland,) and Mary (McChesney) (of New Jersey) Ray was born at Caldwell, N. J., December 23, 1800. After preparatory education in the city of New York, he was two years at Columbia College, until 1814, when the family removed to Baltimore, Md., and thence to the West. In October 1821, when the city of Indianapolis was laid out, Mr. Ray was the Clerk at the first sale of its lots. In 1822 he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court, of the county (Marion.) In 1829 he was re-elected Clerk and Recorder, which office he resigned in 1834 to accept the appointment of Cashier of the State Bank of Indiana, at its organization, and also that of Clerk of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, who had charge of the income of the stock in the Bank held by the State. In the management of these Commissioners the profits to the State reached the sum of three and a quarter million (3,250,000) dollars, the interest on which is forever pledged to the support of the common schools of the State.

These offices he filled until the charter of the Bank expired, and the Bank of the State of Indiana was chartered. Of this Bank he was chosen Cashier in January, 1857. This position he held until after the resignation of the Presidency by the Hon. Hugh McCulloch, and George W. Rathbone, Esq., when he was elected President. This office he has continued to hold till the present time. In the beginning of the late civil war, Mr. Ray was one of the three State Commissioners who successfully negotiated two million (2,000,000) dollars of Indiana War Loan Bonds, for the equipping, arming, and forwarding the volunteers of Indiana to the field. During the entire period of the struggle he showed his deep interest in his country's trouble by his services as Treasurer, at Indianapolis, of the Christian Commission, or the Freedman's Commission, and of the Indiana Soldier's and Seaman's Home.

Mr. Ray was elected Superintendent of the first Sabbath School in Indianapolis in October, 1828. He was chosen elder of the Church on October 17, 1830; which office he still holds, in this the fortieth year of his service. He has served as Commissioner of his Presbytery at several sessions of the General Assembly. In 1866 he was appointed on the Joint Committee on the Reunion of the Presbyterian Church. In the deliberations of this Committee he took an active and important part, especially at the important and decisive meeting held in Philadelphia in 1868, when in 1838, after the division of the Church, fifteen members of the First Church of Indianapolis withdrew to organize the Second Church, under the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. At the instance of Mr. Ray a certificate of good standing was unanimously given to the withdrawing members, with kind expressions of love, and desire for their prosperity, and the continuance of brotherly affection; and at the same time a fair division of the property of the First Church was satisfactorily made. These fraternal desires have been happily fulfilled. In thirty-two years, these Churches, with their offspring, have dwelt together in love and peace, and have been equally blessed. There are now in Indianapolis eight Churches, four of each branch of the Church, now privileged to unite under one banner, in name, as well as in heart.

Financial disaster overtook him in some unfortunate mining operations to which he had given his means largely, and several years of his later life were passed in an easy, but well paid position in the Treasury Department at Washington. During the last year (1876.) he returned to his old home, and died there Feb. 22, 1881."

CORNELIA MARY RAY (458) was married Aug. 31, 1852, to Rev. Jefferson Price Safford. He was the son of Harry and Patience Van Horne Safford, and was born at Zanesville, Ohio, Sept. 22, 1823.

Was District Secretary of the Board of Missions for Ohio and Indiana, from May 1, 1867, to June 1, 1870. In 1868 he returned to his old home in Zanesville, Ohio, where he resided until his death. He was never again pastor, yet these last years of his life were among his most active and useful ones, as he was constantly engaged in preaching. He served as stated supply at Brownsville (Ohio) Church, from Jan. 1, 1870, until Oct. 1876, at the same time supplying also the Church at Fairmount, Ohio, from Jan. 1, 1870 until April 1, 1877; Roseville (Ohio) Church, from July 16, 1871 until April 30, 1873. CAROLINE CONKLIN MILLS (515) was married March 21, 1827, to Jabez Lindsley Allen, son of Timothy Allen, of Morristown, N. J., and grandson of Gilbert Allen. He was born at Morristown, N. J., Dec. 24, 1805, and died at Dover, N. J., Sept. 22, 1869. He was a leading and influential citizen in the community where he resided. He was a very benevolent man, and gave to every good work, "As the Lord had prospered him." "A good man, a kind and indulgent husband and father," is the testimony of one who knew him intimately. From a historical discourse delivered by Rev. B. C. Magie, at the Semi-Centennial Anniversary of the Dover, N. J. Presbyterian church, Oct. 4, 1885, we copy the following:

"The most liberal man in the congregation, the best supporter of the church, was Jabez L. Allen. It was chief to his gifts and efforts, that the first church was built. At the same time he made the largest contributions to objects of benevolence, his generosity often awakening the gratitude of his pastor by what he did for him, over and above his subscription, towards making up the promised stipend. The Presbyterian church at Stanhope, N. J., desired the pastoral services of a minister, but could not make up the salary without asking for help from the Home Missionary Society. The minister was unwilling that the funds of that society, so much needed at the West, should be appropriated at the East. To obviate this difficulty, Mr. Allen gave a hundred dollars to that church, for several years. In his will he gave ten thousand dollars towards the building of a new church, and five thousand dollars for a parsonage. The former was on condition that the congregation begin to build the new church within a year from the time of his death. The terms of the bequest were accepted, and the new church costing thirty thousand dollars, was dedicated in Nov. 1872. The memorial window in the front of the church very appropriately preserves his memory."

At a meeting of the session of the church soon after his death, they paid the following testimonial to his memory and worth :

"For more than a third of a century, Mr. Allen has been a most valuable and honorable Elder in this church, and by his death the session loses a wise consellor, the church, a most exemplary member, and the congregation, its best supporter."

The following notices of the death of Charles L. Mills (518) are copied from different publications:

From the Lawrence American.

On Friday evening, Oct. 3, 1884, after a long and painful illness, Rev. Charles L. Mills entered into rest, in the seventy-third year of his age. He was born in Morristown, N. J., Aug. 11, 1812, and was one of a family of nine children who reached adult age, six of whom survive him. In this large household he learned those lessons of generosity, thoughtfulness and family affection, which characterized his manhood, and his godly parents gave to him that faithful christian nurture, which early ripened into christian character, and consecration to the christian ministry. Turning aside from a business career, he fitted for college at Bloomfield, N. J., and at the age of nineteen, entered Princeton College. At the end of the first year, he joined the corresponding class at Yale College, and was graduated in 1835. Among his class-mates at Yale, were the late Edward Buck, Esqr., and Prof. John L. Taylor, D.D., both afterwards of Andover, and Rev. Daniel Butler, Rev. A. M. Colton, and Rev. A. C. Thompson, all intimately connected with Andover. Prof. Thatcher of Yale, President Fisher, of Hamilton, Clinton, N. Y., Prof. Brockelsby, of Trinity, and many other eminent men, were in the same class. Mr. Mills entered at once upon his theological studies at Princeton Seminary, but near the close of the second year, his delicate health compelled him to abandon them. He was persuaded, however, to take license to preach, and he went west, in the hope that change of climate and an active life would make it possible for him to continue in the ministry. This hope was realized, and for more than forty-five years he was able to do effective work as a preacher, though only through an exercise of will, was nothing less than heroic. His longest pastorate was at Brockton, Mass., where he labored ten years. That ministry ended more than twenty years ago, but the power of it was shown in the resolutions passed by the church when they heard of his decease, and in the deputation they sent to attend his funeral. The course of his ministry, and the character of his preaching, especially in those latter years, were largely determined by the limitations under which he suffered, and by the great talents they developed. He planted new churches, and prepared the way for the first pastor, he revived drooping churches and infused into them his own abounding courage, he re-organized distracted churches, inspiring them with his own overflowing forbearance and charity, he held up the hands of over-worked pastors, he came in as a new and quickening force in times of spiritual refreshing, he filled temporary pastorates of a few weeks or months, or even longer duration, again and again he declined office in connection with the missionary boards, and calls to settlement. He belonged perforce to the "ministry at large." Thus he labored, sometimes as pastor, until an utter failure of health compelled him to give up, but more frequently without settlement, in the East and in the West, in city and in country, with large and cultivated congregations and with the humbler assemblies, at a large salary or without salary, always rejoicing in being able to preach the gospel, and encouraged by the marked spiritual results which followed his labors. A partial list of places will indicate the wide range of his service: South Hanover, Ind., Durham, Conn., Ashland, Mass., and Indianapolis, Ind. Brockton, Wrent-

ham, Easton, Boston, Highlands, (Highland Church) Boston, (Old Colony Chapel) West Somerville, Mass., Norway, Bethel, Oldtown, Portland, Bangor, Me., St. Johns, N. B., North Reading and Ballordville. In these places he was always the christian minister, absorbed in the calling which enlisted every power of intellect and heart. His preaching was strong, sententious, simple, often extemporaneous, and pre-eminently biblical. His chief aim was the conversion of souls. In the ready, abundant and apposite use of Scripture texts, he had a wonderful faculty. The Bible was his storehouse of illustration and expression. This was not an affectation, not a mannerism, but the natural utterance of a mind suffused with very language of inspiration. A series of eight sermons which he preached in the Chapel of the Theological Seminary, and Phillips Academy in 1877, will never be forgotten by those who heard them, so rich were they in apt quotations from the Holy Scriptures

His affections were singularly warm and strong, his disposition sunny and winsome. He turned towards his home as a shrine—and loved his fellow men with a hopefulness which nothing could quench. His life was enriched by the choice friendship of gifted men, and his sympathies for institutions of learning, were only second to his love for the churches. He took a lively interest in the public school system, and served for several years as a member of the school Committee, in Jamaica Plain and Boston.

The last years of his life were spent in Andover, Mass., where his family have resided since his death.

C. P. F. BANCROFT, Andover, Mass.

From the Christian Mirror, Portland.

"Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

"This is the epitah which I would write over the grave of him whose life-work was to reconcile man to God and man to man. Strangely successful was he in this work. In his hands men's heart were plastic. What to other ministers seemed to be iron, in his hands were as clay. He filled a unique place in the gospel ministry. He did a work which others could not do. His greatness was the greatness of simplicity. His power was the power of character infused and enthused by the Spirit of God."

REV. CHARLES A. DICKINSON, Lowell.

FROM OTHER PAPERS.

"Brother Mills was a genuine and cordial friend, a pure a devoted Christian, and a persistent worker and peacemaker in the church. His chief aim was the conversion of souls, and, to that end, the establishment of organized work."

"Mr. Mills was a very liberal man, often putting his hand down deep into his own pocket to relieve needy people, or to further the work in which he was engaged."

Another writes: "Mr. Mills will be affectionately remembered by many of our people and others in this city (Portland) and vicinity, by whom he was highly esteemed for his labors of love among us, having supplied our pulpit several months in 1879-80, and visited among our people with much interest, who have reason to bless his name."

"Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy blest employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

JABEZ MILLS COOK (548) attended college at Princeton, N. J., and studied medicine with the late Dr. Willard Parker, of New York City. After graduating at the college of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, he commenced the practice of medicine in Toledo, Ohio. At the beginning of the civil war, he received a commission as Assistant Surgeon in the 24th Ohio Regiment. He was afterwards promoted to Surgeon, and subsequently to Brigade Surgeon. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Chicamauga, and was in Libby prison for some time. He was a very successful surgeon. At the close of the war, he returned to Toledo, and remained there in the practice of his profession until 1875. As his health was much impaired, and his family expressing a strong desire that he should be nearer his father's home, he left Toledo, and settled at Adams, Ind., where he died April 20, 1884. From the concurrent testimony of those who knew him well, he was "a true friend, a dutiful son, a kind and affectionate brother, and died loved and lamented by a large circle of friends. He was never married.

EMMA ELIZA COOK (550) was married June 9, 1870, to Marshall Grover, in Greensburg, Ind. He is a druggist, and resides at Greensburg, Ind. They have had two children who died in infancy.

LOUISA MILLS (520) was married in September, 1842, to Barnabas Maynard Fay, at Morristown, N. J. He was born at Berlin, Worcester Co., Mass., July 27, 1806. He died at Kendall Green, Washington, D. C., on Sunday morning, March 8, 1885, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. Mr. Fay was of Puritan stock, being a descendant in the sixth generation of John Fay, who came to this country from England, in the ship "Speedwell," in 1656, and settled in Worcester Co., Mass. The religious element inherited from this Pilgrim ancestor was strengthened by the influence of his early surroundings, and was through life the dominant one in his character. His parents were Deacon Dexter and Zilpah (Maynard) Fay. He was the second in a family of nine children, four sons and five daughters, all but one of whom lived to have families of their own. His father was a farmer, and the boy grew up with the blessings of sound health, simple tastes, Christian training, a habit of self-dependence, and that common sense which is, perhaps, the most valuable crop of the New England farm. He went to Amherst Academy to fit himself for college. While there he became conscious of his deepening interest in religion, and wrote of it to his father, who at once desired that he should prepare for the Christian ministry. He accordingly continued his studies with this object in view, and entered Yale College, from which he was graduated in 1833. He defrayed his college expenses by teaching, so that he was able to return to his father the money that had been advanced for his education. From 1833 (the year of his graduation from Yale College) to 1838, he was a teacher in the New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. In the course of this time he studied theology at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, and in May, 1840, he was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church in Hardwick, Worcester county, Mass., near the home of his childhood. In September, 1842, he married Miss Louise Mills, of Morristown,

N. J., a sister of his college friend, the Rev. Chas. L. Mills, late of Andover, Mass. She was a woman of culture, sensibility and piety, and the union was a happy one. The following autumn he gave up his church and taught school in Durham, Conn., for two years. From 1845 to 1850 he was settled over the Congregational Church in Wilmington, Mass. It would seem that he had not the preacher's gift, for after a fair trial of his powers he decided to give up the work of pastor for that of teacher. He had, however, such success in both his parishes as was sure to attend a man of his kindly disposition, who was working to the best of his ability.

In 1850 Mr. Fay removed with his family to Indianapolis, Ind., and was for several years a teacher in the Institution for the Blind in that city. Three years later the "Trustees of the Michigan Asylums," who were visiting other States in search of information, came to Indianapolis, and finding that Mr. Fay had experience in teaching both the deaf and the blind, they invited him to become principal of the school to be established in Michigan for the education of both classes. The city—then village—of Flint was selected as the site of the institution. A suitable building was rented, and the school was opened for the reception of pupils in February, 1854. There were twelve pupils during the first session.

In spite of the many difficulties and discouragements incident to the establishment of a new institution in a new country, Mr. Fay's earnest and devoted labors in its behalf were crowned with success. The number of pupils increased steadily, able and efficient teachers were chosen, and liberal appropriations were obtained from the State Legislature, by means of which land was purchased, and the present ample buildings, now devoted exclusively to the use of the deaf, were erected. He remained in charge of the institution until 1863, when he resigned on account of Mrs. Fay's ill health.

In the autumn of the same year he received the appointment of chaplain to the 23d regiment of Michigan Infantry, then in active service in Tennessee. Owing to severe exposure and fatigue on the way to join his regiment he was taken ill with dysentery; he also contracted rheumatism, from which he suffered more or less all his after-life, and in consequence of these disabilities he was soon obliged to resign his commission.

For several years following he was engaged as a banker in East

Saginaw, Mich. The enterprise, at first successful, afterwards met with reverses, and finally resulted in the loss of nearly all his savings of previous years. As soon as he saw what the issue was likely to be, he took measures to withdraw from the business before failure should come to involve others as well as himself in ruin, and while his own fortune was sacrificed he had the consolation of knowing that of all who had entrusted money to his care no one lost a penny. He afterwards removed to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., for the health of his family, and remained there active in all works of faith and charity, until his home was broken up by the death of his wife, in February, 1880, when he came to Kendall Green.

Notwithstanding her feeble health, Mrs. Fay was a woman of unusual strength of will; she was thus enabled to aid her husband under circumstances where most people would have claimed the exemption of an invalid. Beside the care of her own family, she always had her household affairs planned so well that she had the pleasure of cheering with her presence those who were sick or in trouble, and of relieving the wants of the poor among her neighbors.

Of his three sons, the oldest took up his father's work of instructing the deaf; the second died in early childhood; the third, William Walcott, entered the Christian ministry and is now (1886) pastor of the Congregational Church at Hampton, N. H.

With the exception of summer visits to Saratoga, Mr. Fay spent his remaining years with his oldest son at Kendall Green. He took a lively interest in national affairs, and was a frequent visitor at the Capitol, until his increasing infirmities narrowed the circle of his activity, though not of his interests. His mental faculties remained unimpaired to the end. He never spoke of his health except in reply to questions, nor allowed his pain to cast a shadow on the household. His unvarying patience and fortitude in long continued and extreme suffering awakened the admiration of all about him. He gently rebuked a friend who praised him on this account. "It is no credit to me," he said, "if God gives me the grace to bear it." A few months before his death, on parting with a friend, he expressed the hope that he might not live for another meeting, but he soon took occasion to apologize for having spoken thus, fearing he might leave the impression of having, in an unfilial spirit, seemed to choose his own way. The faith in a Heavenly Father's guidance, which had upheld him in many a time of trial and perplexity, sustained him to the last, and he reached the height where he could give thanks even for his pain.

After his death his children, grandchildren and neighbors assembled in the room where his last months were passed, and a simple service of remembrance and farewell was conducted by his old and valued friend, the Rev. Dr. J. W. Chickering.

His remains were taken by his sons to Dover, N. J., where, after a prayer at the grave by his son Walcott, they were laid beside those of his beloved wife.

Mr. Whittlesey was graduated at Yale College, New Haven, Conn., and studied Theology at New Haven. While a tutor at Yale College, he was appointed by the A. B. C. F. M., to take charge of the Batticotta Seminary, Jaffra, Ceylon. He accepted the appointment, and sailed from Boston on the 14th of October, 1841, two weeks after his marriage. In the spring of 1856, his church very reluctantly gave him up to take charge of the educational cause for a time, at the urgent request of the New School General Assembly. They wished to merge all the different local educational societies of their church in one body, and place it under the care of the General Assembly. Mr. Mills took an active part in this work, intending when it was accomplished, to return to the more direct work of preaching the gospel. Obituary notices of Dr. Ebenezer Coe (451) published at the time of his death:

In Memoriam.

"DR. COE is dead! This sad notice surprised and grieved our community on the morning of June 16th, 1870. The preceding evening we had seen him about our village streets as usual, apparently in the enjoyment of his ordinary health and strength. He had, however, been indisposed for two or three days, and was taken with severe pains in the head about 7 o'clock on the evening of June 15th, and in about three hours thereafter breathed his last.

Dr. Coe was born near Morristown, New Jersey, on October 11th, 1789, and was therefore at the time of his death, in the 81st year of his age. He began the study of medicine in New Jersey, and graduated at the University of New York in that city, in 1815. He commenced the practice of his profession at Bedington, N. J., on October 18th, 1815; he remained there nine months, and soon realized a very lucrative practice. His brother having removed to Gerardstown, requested him to accompany his family to this place; he did so, not intending to remain. After his arrival his brother desired him to remain, assuring him there was sufficient practice for both of them. About this time he was taken very ill, and upon his recovery from a sickness of two months he concluded to remain in Virginia. The practice of himself and brother extended over an area of fifteen miles, frequently requiring an absence of three days from home to make the circuit of their patients. He married Miss Mary Wilson, on November 10th, 1824, and soon after purchased property, and built his dwelling house in this village. Shortly thereafter his brother removed to Indiana, leaving him the entire practice.

In connection with his brother he organized the Sabbath School in this place, and was a ruling Elder in the Presbyterian Church for many years.

As a husband, father, and friend, his deportment was above reproach.

He has passed away in the fulness of years, in the enjoyment of the confidence respect, and affection of the entire community.

Dr. Coe is dead! This notice has come with inexpressible sorrow to the many who have associated with him in the various relations of life; especially to those who have received his medical attention. They will miss the knowledge of their physical constitutions which long experience had given him, and will mourn the loss of a sympathetic friend, as well as of a skillful physician.

Dr. Coe is dead; but his memory will live in the hearts of those who have so long known and trusted him; and the influence of his upright, active and useful life will long be felt in this community.

His earthly remains were attended to their last resting place on Saturday morning, June 18th, by a large concourse of sorrowing friends; the funeral services being conducted by Rev. L. F. Wilson, for many years his friend and pastor."

Life's duty done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth combine to say:
How blest the righteous when he dies.

—Gerardstown Times.

"In the death of Dr. Coe the citizens of Gerardstown and vicinity have sustained an irreparable loss. He had practiced medicine in that neighborhood for fifty-four years and had not entirely relinquished it up to the time of his death. He was a man of generous impulses, kind hearted and affable, and for many years an Elder in the Presbyterian church.

As the ripe oak falls in the forest, has he gone from his walks among men. He lived a life of usefulness, and died the death of a christian, his loss mourned by all who knew him."—New Era, Martinsburg, W. Va.

The following obituary, by her friend and pastor Rev. Clifford S. Arns, was published in the New York Observer soon after her death:

"Hilinda, daughter of George and Hilinda (Hawkins) Wickham, died Sept. 20, 1858. She became a christian during a revival in the fall of 1851, and united with the Presbyterian Church at Ridgebury, Orange County, N. Y., in March, 1852. From childhood she seemed to have a special regard for the word and worship of God, but especially after her profession of faith in Christ. She was among the first in the village to receive a Bible for the perfect recitation of the Assembly's catechism. She was asked and answered every question to a letter, without faltering for an instant. The Bible and religious books were her chosen companions. She had little relish for worldly amusements, so common with youthful professors. Her peaceful, happy death was but the legitimate result of a consistent Godly life. In all her declining months she was a stranger to doubt and darkness. As she was admiring the beauty of the sunset, at the close of a beautiful day, she said to a christian friend: 'I shall never look again upon this earthly beauty, but I shall see the beauty of the Lord infinitely more glorious.' Her affection for Christ was ardent and sincere, as the following incident tenderly reveals: After her confinement to the house, anxious to do something for her Lord and Master, she provided a box labelled, "Have you a penny for the heathen," and as one and another visited her, she asked of all an alms for her Lord and Saviour. Precious to her was the work of gathering these offerings for Christ. Sometimes she would say, 'I prayed this morning I might have some visitor who would give me something for my box, and I never thus prayed but that I received precious offerings from unexpected sources.' These offerings to her were of priceless value, the joy and rejoicing of her heart, more desired than the most costly gifts for herself. They seemed to be fuel to cherish and increase her affection for her Saviour. When the last severe attack came on which indicated her approaching end, her mother asked her if she had anything to say to her. She replied, 'Take good care of my missionary box, and my two Bibles, and give to those who have none.' This was her dying charge, her heart offering to the cause of Christ. Sabbath morning, the day before she died, although speechless, she signified by most expressive signs, that the thought of dying on the Sabbath was most precious. Monday morning, the day she died, she sent for her pastor and exclaimed with the utmost delight, 'Oh, now I can speak to you.' 'What do you wish to say?' asked her pastor. 'Tell my young friends to live for Christ, tell christians not to be carried away by the frivolities of time, warn them for me to be faithful to Christ and his cause, and may you, my dear pastor, win many precious souls to Christ. Oh, I am going home. Soon shall I see Jesus of whom I have thought, heard and read so much. Oh! wondrous love and mercy that made him bleed and die for such sinners as I am.' As the darkness of evening gathered around the loving family, she said, 'Mother, this will be a dark night to you, but it will be all light to me.' She again requested her pastor to be sent for, that they might once more unite in family prayer. As he was absent, she wished her mother to pray. The dying daughter followed in prayer, and at the close repeated these lines:

'Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Unuttered or expressed;
The motion of a hidden fire,
That trembles in the breast.'

He learned the trade of a saddler and harness maker, which he carried on successfully for thirty-five years in Hudson, N. Y. His reputation in the community which knew him so many years, was that of an exemplary, honest and truthful man. He was many times spoken of by friends in connection with positions of trust and honor within the gift of his fellow citizens. But he invariably declined, and never held any political office. The only office he ever held was that of Director in the Hudson River Bank, now the Hudson River National Bank. In the affairs of this venerable institution, he always manifested the highest degree of interest, having been connected with it as a large stockholder, and one of its Board of Directors for more than thirty years. From the Columbia Republican we copy the following:

"Mr. Davis Conklin Terry, an aged and estimable citizen, died on Tuesday last. For several years he has been compelled to go upon crutches, in consequence of a fall. But the resources of a genial disposition enabled him to bear his misfortune without a murmur.

It is related of the deceased, that upon returning from the funeral of a young acquaintance a few years since, where the beautiful hymn, 'I would not live always' had been sung, he suddenly remarked, 'I have been to heaven.' The music impressed him as almost celestial, and he then requested that the same hymn should be sung when his own funeral should take place. The request was complied with, and the occasion was one of peculiar interest and solemnity.

He was married September 2, 1813, to Deborah Coffin, daughter of Thomas Coffin and wife Sarah Coffin. She was born in Edgartown, Mass., Feb. 22, 1796, and died at Hudson, N. Y., April 29, 1840. He married Dionis Stevens, and came to this country with his wife and four children in 1642. The following obituary notice was published in a Hudson paper at the time of his death :

" After a somewhat protracted illness the above named honored and well-known citizen died at his residence in this city on the morning of the 27th. Deceased occupied many positions of trust during his lifetime, and his death will cause profound regret in this community, where he has so long resided, and where, as elsewhere, he was respected and esteemed by all who knew him. His services as a public officer, embracing a period of many years, brought him in contact with the masses of the people, and his uniform courtesy and accommodating and cheerful disposition, made him hosts of warm-hearted friends. His moral character was highly exemplary, his temper placid, disinterested, unaffectedly reserved, and in his transactions with others, while exact, he nevertheless was always courtly, pleasant, just and candid. Punctuality with him was a rule rarely violated, and he was even prompt at his post of duty. He sometimes met with occurrences well calculated to put to the test one's patience, but he was seldom in a passion, as his natural gentleness of disposition made him invulnerable. His every-day life was characterized by evenness of temper, probity, and strict honesty in his dealings with his fellow men. Covetous himself of the good opinion of the public, and by nature possessed of a sensitive, tender disposition, deceased was ever vigilant that no act or word of his should wound the feelings of others, and he met all upon the broad level of a common humanity, a kind word and a smile for all, from the least to the greatest.

His personal reminiscences of men and events covered a wide range, and from the storehouse of his retentive memory, vigorous up to within a few months of his death, was wont to flow either the ludicrous or pathetic side of human nature when mingling at the social circle, in depicting which he was a perfect master. His fund of general information was prolific, and his manner of conversation engaging and fascinating, and this made him a welcome guest wherever he went.

In the years 1852 and 1856 he represented the city in the Board of Supervisors, and in 1858 was chosen one of the Superintendents of Public Schools, to secure the success of which he was most earnest and solicitous. He was elected to the office of County Clerk on the Democratic ticket in 1864, again in 1867, and also in 1870, and occupied that trustworthy position longer than any previous incumbent, and always to the perfect satisfaction of his constituents and those having business to transact with the office. Careful to a fault, precise and methodical in his work, he made a model official, and retired from the cares of the trustworthy position crowned with the highest honors that can be conferred upon any officer, the satisfaction of having done his whole duty. In 1876, a want having long existed for a civil list for Columbia county, Mr. Terry, at the urgent request of many friends, compiled a useful and valuable book, containing the names of all National and State officers, County officers and Supervisors, elected or appointed from this County from its organization in 1786 up to 1876, as also the city officers and members of the Common Council of the city of Hudson, from its incorporation in 1785. He was a ready writer, and many articles from his able pen have enriched the columns of the public prints. In 1873 he was appointed a member of the Board of Water Commissioners, and continued as a member of that body up to the time of his death. He was Director and Vice-President of the National Hudson River Bank, and also a Trustee of the Hudson City Savings Institution, in which, up to a few weeks of his death, he also filled the important office of secretary and treasurer, resigning the position in consequence of failing health.

In the early part of the war deceased was engaged in the Quartermaster's Department under Gen. McKinstry, with headquarters at St. Louis, and rendered efficient service to the Government while thus employed. He was for many years an honored member of Allen Lodge No. 92, I. O. of O. F., and of Union Encampment of the same fraternity, and he occupied with marked ability all the chairs in both these bodies. He was also a revered member of Hudson Lodge No. 7, F. & A. M., and Lafayette Commandery No. 7, and was recognized and respected as a devoted and faithful workman by the craft. The direct cause of his death was general paralysis, the premonitory symptoms of which had been observed by friends a short time preceding his retirement from active business. He goes to his grave crowned with honorable years, leaving as a legacy to his fellow citizens in the community where he has so long resided the priceless heritage of a life rounded out in usefulness, a spotless reputation, and a name upon which no stain has ever rested.

Frederick Glover resided in Brooklyn, and carried on an extensive business for those days, as a master builder. Many of the finest private residences in that city, many churches, and other public buildings were his work. His son John L., was associated with him in business the last twenty-five years of his life, and together they put up nearly all of the numerous buildings erected by Augustus and John B. Graham, the Brooklyn Apprentices' Library, City Hospital, Old Ladies' Home, also the Sailors' Home, on Staten Island. He was devoted to his business, conservative and just in all his dealings, taking pride in the fact that no financial failure overtook him in his long business career of fifty years. He had great faith in Brooklyn his adopted city, and her future growth. He took no active part in political matters, but he considered it every man's sacred duty to watch and vote for the best men for all public trusts. Himself and wife were devoted members of the Baptist church. He died Aug. 9, 1863, after five days illness, and was buried at Mattituck, L. I.

JOSEPH TERRY GLOVER (1052) married in Brooklyn, Aug. 29, 1855, Octarine, daughter of Jira and Eliza Payne, of Brooklyn Heights; died at Bodee, California, Feb. 20, 1886. He was a merchant in California, having settled in Sacramento in the year 1858, became a partner in the firm of Booth & Co., wholesale provisions, in San Francisco and Sacramento cities, and was connected with the above firm from the time of his arrival in California to the day of his death. His wife's parents were among the original founders of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Plymouth Church, of Brooklyn Heights.

As a boy, he possessed a frank, affectionate and fearless disposition. He had a quick temper, which was, however, modified by the force of rare generosity. If by the former quality he was sometimes led to ill considered and unjust action, he was constrained by the latter to make more than ample atonement. He arrived in California May 10th, 1858. Soon after he found employment with the firm of Booth & Co. Here his eminent business ability was recognized, and in 1865, he was admitted to the firm as a partner. This connection he maintained until his death. In this capacity he showed that he possessed in a marked degree, the essential qualities of a successful man in business.

To a quick perception and sound judgment, he added the attractive qualities of a strong personality. By his fair and manly dealing, he seldom failed to win and retain the friendship of those with whom he had business relations. He sought the advantages of trade only by open and straight forward conduct, never by the sacrifice of self respect, or by a departure from the strict rule of commercial integrity. He cared little for books, but was especially interested in the men he knew, and in the events which fell within the range of his personal experience. By daily intercourse with many different minds, he formed his opinions and judgments which whether correct or otherwise, he seldom changed. To his friends, he was loyalty itself. He guarded their reputations more carefully and defended them more warmly than he would his own. And the provocation must be very great to cause him to renounce a friendship once formed. But in spite of this tenacity, there were instances when friendly relations between him and others ceased. Yet in these cases even after years of coldness and indifference had intervened, it required only the information that sickness or other trouble had overtaken the offender, to induce him to lay aside all feeling of animosity or pride, and to extend his helpful hand, never empty, to succor and to comfort. Devoted in heart and substance to those he called friends, he was far from exacting from them what he so freely gave. Closely allied to this phase of his generosity, was his remarkable sensitiveness to and sympathy with every form of physical suffering, as was often shown by acts of delicate attention. This abundant kindness brought to him the sympathy of a very large circle of acquaintances, which was specially manifest at the time of his illness, and at the sad news of his sudden death.

Letters and telegrams of condolence from all parts of the State and from all classes were received, expressing the general sorrow. His death was a loss, not to his relatives and friends alone, but to a large number of the poor, to miserable broken human wrecks, whom few pity and to whom fewer still give of their abundance. He gave liberally, seldom refusing and even more seldom, whether wisely or unwisely, inquiring the use to be made of his gifts. He was passionately fond of music, a lover of fine arts, and in all his purchases of any kind, he showed a refinement and culture rare in men. Next to the society of men of his own age and tastes, he found his chief pleasure in the company of children. With them he was at his best, and in their eyes he was a hero. He especially enjoyed associating with the children of the families of his relatives and friends, and with them he was always gentle, considerate and gallant.

“Capt. Conklin left Amagansett for New York in his new sloop Traveller, Dec. 23, 1811. A warm, pleasant afternoon was succeeded about midnight by a terrific cold wind, and a blinding snow storm. The vessel struck towards morning on Eaton’s Neck. Four persons, (Capt. Conklin being one of them), out of the six on board, succeeded in reaching the shore, but in such a state of exhaustion that Capt. Conklin and another man soon fell down, unable to go further. Their two companions succeeded after some time in finding a house, but on returning they found the other man dead, and carrying Capt. Conklin to the house, he too expired soon after. The two persons whom they were compelled to leave on the vessel, a brother and sister from the Hudson River region, who had been spending some time at Amagansett, were found on board the next day both dead, locked in each other’s arms.”
